If you have access to an attic a J-Pole antenna is ideal. I made one several years ago for a total cost of around $11. and it worked fine for local and DX. Dipoles are great especially for DX however fall short on local communications. Google and you'll find plenty of instructions and designs. Another suggestion would be to eBay a antenna tuner, preferably one of the MFJ's. A single wire and counterpoise works great.

Nice radio, ran one for a couple of years. Still have it tucked away in it's original box. Hasn't be opened. One of these days will have to fire it up.
Good luck with the auction!

GE's Superbase is an excellent radio. Uses a O2A chip. One of the best receivers for it's time.

I love Ranger! I had a few of the 2950/70 variations, and Ranger was my favorite back before I discovered mainstream Ham gear. Hopefully, you're working toward getting that type of equipment! :-) I still have a soft spot for Ranger, and browse their catalog from time to

I have a Ranger 2950 which goes from 26 to 32MHz. Its excellent in the fact that if theres not a lot of DX or local stations on i can scoot upto 31MHz and evesdrop on the cordless phones :o)..You cant do that on a cobra or Lincoln... well not without some severe adapting anyhows... a very underrated rig in my opinion as they never fetch as much as Lincolns on eBay but have a much better coverage.

I have a 2970, it has push pull output to 150W, for the rest freq range is the same as 2950, best one I ever had, lots of DX.
Very stable too.
The 2970 has a big heatsink on the bottom side.
Have not seen people with one for sale here, all keepers :-)
I like the push buttons.

Lol yea lots of things to push. I would like the 2970 next but would need to sell a few other things first. Are these variable wattage and what, if they are, do they start from? Id hate to upset the neighbours with TVI :o)

Those are not the same company. Ranger AR3500 was made by a totally different company.

Oh, it starts rather low, I'v measured lemme see:

just measured 3.3 A at about 13V with RF output at minimum in FM.
The set itself consumes about 400mA, so 2.9A = 13x2.9 = 37.7 W input to power amp, so maybe about half that (15 to 18W) to antenna?
Add some SWR etc...
But maybe some more it is a nice class B symmetrical amp.
At full power in SSB it will peak 18A (says manual) but this meter only goes to 10A, so have not checked.
Antenne wattmeter is kaput.. dunno what happend to it, dropped it or something.
18A at 13.6 = 244 W input for 150 out the effciency would be 61%.
So if it is really 61% at lower loads too you'd have 16W minimum in FM.
Seems I was close.

Suggested Voice Mail Message for US Department of Defense

Thank you for calling the United States DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE; the authorized enforcer for the New World Order .Please have your United Nations Resolution number ready.

At this time all of our units are out, or are otherwise engaged. Please leave a message with your country, name of organization, the region, the type a crisis that you have.There is no need to leave a number; at which, we might call you. Your caller I.D. and voice print will be automatically processed, and a print out of your dossier and profile will be delivered to the appropriate agencies; including our thought police.

As soon as we have sorted out the Balkans, Iraq, Korea, China, marching up and down the streets of Washington, D.C., and compulsory "Consideration Of Others" training, we will return your call. Please speak after the tone, or if you require more options, please listen to the following numbers:

If your concern is distant, with a temperate climate and good hotels, and can be solved by one or two low risk, high altitude bombing runs, please press 1 for the United States Air Force. Please note this service is not available after 1630 hours, or on weekends. Special consideration will be given to customers requiring satellite or stealth technology who can provide additional research and development funding. Please identifyEXACTLY who it is, that does not believe in peace, so that we can dropbombs on the right people... (mostly).

If your inquiry is not urgent, please press 2 for the Rapid Deployment Force.

If you want to report a thought crime please press 3.

If you are in real hot trouble, please press 4, and your call will be routed to the United States Army Special Operations Command. Please note that a compulsory credit check will be required to ensure you can afford the inherent TDY costs. Also be aware that USASOC may bill your account at any time and is not required to tell you why, as it will be classified.

If you are interested in joining the Army and wish to be shouted at, paid little, have premature arthritis, put your wife and family in a condemned hut miles from civilization, are prepared to work your ass off daily, risking your life, in all weather and terrain, both day and night, and whilst watching Congress erode your original benefits package, then please stay on the line. Your call will shortly be connected to a bitter passed-over Army Recruiter in an old strip mall down by the Post Office.

Have a pleasant day, and thank you again for trying to contact the United States DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

On my site, there is a microphone wiring database. You select the radio from a drop down list.
If you also select the microphone you are using, it will give you a diagram with wire colours.

No maybe about it. If you're partaking of a debate on this subject, either you or the person you debate are dead wrong, as the number of licensees is no secret and is easily distinguished. The numbers have shrunk, no maybe about it.

That's part of it. The cash aspect involved makes it so it wouldn't matter at this point if ham radio managed to regain the numbers they had when it peaked...they would still lose the freqs. The feds have it on the chopping block because it's not deemed necessary or important with the sole exception of some emergency freqs being set aside.

You're throwing money away. The FCC has -already- spied that portion of the spectrum. The arrl has always been a dollar short and day late on this issue.
People just don't give a care for hammie radio, cb included. It's a non-issue. I've met people who were surprised you could still buy radio and cb gear.

I would suppose those who don't dx and are avid pc users probably talk about it more than they use their radios.
I have much more in common with the hammies who grace this group.

Well then, holding with that motion, I would say the ticket in this example would be more of an insurance type of thing than a benefit and that's only IF you're blowing watts out.

>In that example, yes.

 They were told so much more was available if they would only take the time to actually study and learn something instead of memorizing test questions. But this specific group wanted the privileges without the "benefit" of learning code and getting a higher class ticket.

>The sad part is the huge emphasis place on

Neither is your statement regarding support of the code. When nothing else can get through, code can and THAt is why there is such an emphasis placed on code. Those old-timers KNOW this and try to pass that knowledge to others who are too green or simply refuse to acknowledge such facts.

>If one doesn't care about working HF DX then >there really isn't much motivation to move up.

In additoon to the above, many elevate their status so they can help and teach others. Whether you agree with it or not, cw was and is an integral part of hammir radio.
Cb'ers (or anyone for that matter) should not change their mind based on what others say or place value upon.

>OK.

>Regards,

I don't run huge amps or power. I've never been concerned about the FCC. They can't even answer the public's inquirys correctly without weeks gone by and mass research on what they were supposed to already know. They are one of the most incompetent, useless and fraudulent arms of the US govt. and it takes only a little common sense to confound this entity who most certainly does not have your or the arrl's interests at heart.

How about using links to the jpeg files (on your own server)? This would

I should not react to this, but anyways ;-)
CB is cool, I had some great contacts using CB locally, and some good DX.
You do not need a license (here), just an approved set.
The frequency 27MHz is cool too, at night locally, in the afternoon here sometimes the world.
You are allowed to use AM FM SSB and FM packet.....
Nobody uses CW, so no need to learn that :-)

The antennas are just about at the length where a 5/8 wave vertical is doable...
Perfect band, resonable size capacitors, inductors make these any time with 20 turns or so... Not difficult for power transistors.... so from an electronic point of view easy to do, easy to get equipment too.
Whats your problem with CB? You PAYED for that license? LOL

Err i think you will find on the whole CB radio enthusiasts use the radio for fun, entertainment and the odd help here and there. Just because they dont sit an Amateur exam and then waffle on for hours into the night about tomatoes and health issues and which diode is the best and which bit of wire makes the best antenna bla.. bla.. makes them more human as they havnt become completely geek'ified like some of our more established "no life other than radio" users. Not all amateurs are like this but most sensible amateurs will know plenty of other amateurs who are.

But to your first point, CB was meant for the average Jo to communicate to his fellow homies, not to take over his life and to pigeon hole himself into nerdland like so many amateurs do... so they are intended for the everyday person which makes them more popular that amateur radio's although i know quite a few CB'ers who use ham radios although they spend most of their time on CB frequencies.

Your attitude also is typical of the "old school" amateur which is why im happy things are changing and your thoughts are a bit out of date..

Thereagain i realise you only typed that to create a responce as you probably havnt got anything else interesting to say.... seems strange though a superior amateur would waste his time in a CB Newsgroup..... 10-4

Awaiting flack..
Graham

a bigot for sure but no worries.

Hi Jim,
I was looking into the meaning of this word and to a degree its partially true but a bigot is intolerant. I am not intolerant. I try as much as possible to take people as i find them. I have black friends and a couple of asian friends and my brothers wife is Chinese but i am tolerant and polite to them. That said im not one to be held back by the "liberal limp wristed fairys". If its a fact that a certain race seem to be cornering the market in whatever subject then im not afraid to voice my opinion.
Asians and blacks arent afraid of voicing their opinions so why should we be?
Hope your days going well :o)

Graham

It doesn't matter really how good your ground system is. If your antenna takes a direct strike and 99.999% of the energy goes into the ground you will still get several thousand volts (or hundreds of thousands of volts) coming down your coax. Unless you are willing to spend thousands of dollars on an active lightning protection system your only protection is to disconnect.

>are, do they start from? Id hate to upset the neighbours with TVI :o)
OK, I designed and build a new Watt meter today, thsi is the BIGGEST watt meter you can imagine, once got this thing from a lot of stuff that was to be thrown away.
What I actually do is a peak detection of the RF output at the antenna, and then used the calculator and dummy load a lot...
Calibrated with comparing with an other known set, diguital meter and scope, should be within 5% or so...
Because this meter had a different scale I wrote the new values in it (it is so big hehe).
Here is what I have measured:
FM
RF gain Watts
minimum 2W
button pointing left 10W button pointing up 27.5W button pointing right 30W
maximum 35W

AM is the same, is SSB with mike gain to max and blowing in the mike and RF gain to max: 144 or more watt (end meter scale).

So, I think with 2W minimum on FM and AM you will be fine.

I know nothing really will stop a direct strike but the more 90 degree turns you can make with you coax before entry the better! lightning doesnt like 90 degree angles, also i bring my coax all the way to the ground with a gas discharge unit at its lowest point then 90 back up to entry,most likely a drop in the bucket but ive never been wiped out. I also have 15 or so ground rods spread every 4 ft connected with stranded bare #6 then i covered it with dirt most of this is for field ground but field ground should be bonded to antenna ground always and is in my case, also bond them to your service ground,i also run my equipment off of battery backup units with avr and really nice surge clamping characteristics UPC and Cyberpower make nice units that stops that third order harmonic feedback wipe out thru your power in case of a strike

well this is just my poormans attempt to protect my equipment

Thanks for your detailed answer. Its nice to know people are still prepaired to take the time to help. I might buy one of these then if i can find one cheap enough (not too cheap as to be a duff one though) as im in no real rush being as i already have the 2950.

I forgot to ask, do you think the 10-14A PSU i have will be strong enough to power this (when on full power) or should i think about getting a 20A one?

According the FCC, there has been 32,000 more amateurs advancing to amateur extra after the 13 and 20 wpm code was replaced by the 5 wpm code requirement. All of the other classes of operators saw a 20,000+ decrease in the number of operators. While some of these numbers could allow for the advancing to amateur extra, it is likely that people simply did not renew. So, radio may HAVE BEEN in the downslide, but it IS getting better.

I have used an 8A computer AT supply, it works on that, used it with an ampere meter, kept the current below 8A... that is RF power knob a bit before middle position.
Now it is on a 12V 12Ah gel battery, and charging from an AC adaptor I modified to make 13.56 volt (and it has current limit).
So, the battery is always charging, but with about 1 A maximum.
The battery is made by 'Enduring' (China).
I have not run out of battery power yet....
In theory it give should less then an hour at full power, but in SSB you are on average much lower then that, only the peak current counts.
Your 14A PSU will not be able to handle the SSB peak of 18A, at full RF power.
Although my charger is only 1A, the battery will do 18 A peak no problem.

These links are about SSB average power, quoting an average of about 14dB:
http://www.ac6rm.net/mailarchive/html/elecraft-list/2003-01/msg01197.html

http://www.ac6rm.net/mailarchive/html/elecraft-list/1999-11/msg00596.html

So, maybe 1/8 the power on average, so 12/18 * 8 = 5.3 hours speech at 150W PEP in SSB on a battery charge...

In FM much less time, given half the time speaking at 12A perhaps 2 hours...

So, the gist is, you can get away in SSB with a small power supply and a good small battery.
That will give you isolated hum free operation too, and you are still OK if power fails, say in case of flooding or some disaster.
That is why I did it this way (and it was cheaper then a new 18A PSU too).

It is your choice, you can always use reduced power.

Today on channel 19 in Chesterfield County, VA

Some idiot who keys up on top of others while they are talking and then tells them that they "ain't gettin' out" (meaning : mudduck radio used by truckers)

Every tractor-trailer on 288 had radio that WAS working.

Also, this individual starts to sell an AVON make-up kit and he was asking $50.00 for it.

He lives near Rte 10 and 288 in a subdivision near the recreation park and the Airport.

So, lock him in and cruise on up to his house and take a picture of his face when he sees a bunch of OTR drivers running to knock the taste out of his mouth.

Heh-heh-heh-heh!

He loves those make-up kits -- guess he wants to look purr-tee when his date shows up - named paul thomas : "THE Founder of Manly Love" or maybe he seein how many illegal CB stations he can sell out of his vehicle or his "shack".

Hmmmm

I saw that FCC unit turn off at Rte 10 from 288 North.
Tsk-tsk-tsk.

OH Well!

America has its own problems that NEED to be dealt with before we go over to Iraq or where-ever to "fight their battles for them".

Our Laws in America DO suck - - Ex.
No action will be taken against an aggressive driver until someone dies because of that person driving aggressively.

No stop lights are going up at a certain intersection until someone DIES!

A kid at school is being bullied -- parents tell the school board --- School Board dismisses that claim as BS
Kid gets beaten so bad that he dies from internal injuries School Board tells parents why weren't they notified of the situation before it happened.

know of any other laws that protect the aggressors?
post them here

Why is it that trying to talk on CB everyone wants to know your handle that is the most stupid thing I have ever heard. Some use Tree jumper, or Pole man or others. If not a handle they allways give some name other than there real one. Its like they always trying to hide somthing.

Only you think it's stupid.
It don't bother me one earthly bit.

A stupid question is that which one does not ask!
A stupid answer is that which one does not give to a stupid question that is not asked! .

CB does not need a license (anymore) unfortunately.
So, that opened the "pandora's box" to ANY person who has played with those 49MHz toy radios and just enjoys annoying the hell out of others while those who been around radios know how to operate them and talked on them like civilized folk supposed to do and had those "Coffee-Breaks" and "Club meetings" or monitored channel 9 until the era of those Cell Phones shut Channel 9 down. you rarely find anyone these days monitoring Channel 9 as a REACT station anymore. I mean someone's not just gonna blurt it out. They talk to the right group of people and that's how you learn from others without the label of eavesdropper or "sandbagger".

Some have one handle - by themselve or followed by a numerical identifier. Like "Whistling Dixie", "Chicken Wing / 777/ (Triple-7)", "Dodger", "Pistol Grip", "The Fox", Chesterfield Traveller/ 7775 (Triple-7-5)", while others find it very amusing to confuse others by having multiple handles i.e. "ShortRound"/"Fairplay", and, also this other cb'er who thinks he's a truck driver in Richmond, VA named "Tyrone" who calls himself "Mr. Left-Lane Leroy" "Mr. Food Stamp" and "Mr. Parker" who are all the same person. Listen to their voices. It's actually "Tyrone"
He also badmouths the truck drivers any time he feels like it and at the same time he calls them "His Friends" and helps them out with directions.
"Which way is the wind blowing", today, Tyrone?

E - mail :
Some hide their email to evade uninvited emails from spammers and adverstisements.
So, what's the downfall of that idea?

I do that all the time so my email don't end up on some prankster's list to send me junk mail or spam or viruses.

I've also found a website called "central ops . net"
http://www.centralops.net

Check that out!

You can ping
Run trace routes,
Check an email to see if it's legit
Do a who-is on someone.

And check an I.P. address.

It seems like the SSBers at least run radio like it should be locally, although they still use a name other than their real one. On SSB they will give a proper name but when they switch over to AM the dum ass comes out , they will use something like pole humpier as a handle, crank up the audio with a echooo box, and then add roger beep what a bunch of crap coming from babies that never grew up.

The most stupid thing youve ever heard??? you dont get out enough....
I must also be hiding something because i go by the handle of The Magnum.
Anyhows, as for amateur do you think someone is actually called G4DIP or whatever??? Also just to help you out a little on why in certain cases a handle is a good idea.. you have a friend called "Dave". Now your on the Jolly old 1-9 and decide to call for Dave. Its a busy area and 10 daves respond to you..... hmmmm.. now if you knew Dave as "Partyanimal" and you called partyanimal on the 1-9 then your more likely to get him straight away... simple eh.... or would you call out for Dave Smith... Where i live we rarely use handles anyway. As CB is a bit quiet we just normally use first names.
Anyways as you seem to like Amateur and think CB is a joke i recommend you get rid of your CB and go Amateur full time. We will try our best to get by without you ....
Bye now...

Well, I duno, first I am member of a DX club, have an international call sign
(not going to mention it here....) 19IF... 19 is Netherlands area code BTW
There is a lot of DX SSB on 27555.
Locally it is fun, and FM here mostly (AM is allowed now with only 1 Watt) and yes, many people use the amplified mike and echo.
A bit of echo is OK, and a long delay echo is OK too...
It is CB band and you can do that.
When I press just the mike at CH9 often there is an immediate response, sometimes not.
Usually some fixed people are with others on some fixed channels locally.
But there is ALWAYS traffic, although closest packet BBS is now rather weak here... only one packet channel left it seems.
All voice.
I also notice all these people who are regular know about SWR, have their stuff in order, although some over modulate clearly.
Quite a bit of helping each other out too.
And as to roger beep, that CAN be very useful, but on FM you will hear end of transmit from noise just before squelch comes in...

The ultimate in affordable export radios. I owned one of these back in the mid-90's. It's a wonderful rig. AND, the guy has already performed the transmit modification. This (as you may know) is vastly superior to your Rangers, Galaxies, Presidents, etc. etc.

Any how, my point is, it is brand new and will probably sell for a good price!

I hope someone here grabs it! Be sure to let us know!!

I was just an early teen when I got into CB in 1966 (under an FCC license my dad had to get since I was underage), but my impression here in the midwest as to why "handles" were used, was two fold. First, a lot of CB-ers loved talking skip, and obviously a skip talker was not going to use his real identity or call sign! Second, and more of a vanity term I suspect, people wanted unique fame for their station.

As to the use of handles today, it's anyone's guess. In fact, there may be more reason now than ever to protect one's identitiy. Used to be, you only had to fear (and respect) the FCC. Now, you've got to be careful of nut-cases out there.

Hmmmm! Well, I guess the author of this thread could get on the CB (since this is a CB site) and use a handle like "Twister", or "Katrina". to put fear in those people and drive them out of his town.

Seriously, he has a point, but it never is a good idea to generalize this way. Good and cautious advice, but also advice we could all put into use everyday, for all people.

The license numbers are in question since a US license is good for 10 years before renewal is required. There really isn't much you can do to see if the person licensed is still breathing from the official FCC data. Also the license numbers don't tell you who is still currently active on the bands either. Some have a license just so they can use the bands for RC control applications, which is legal on some of the bands with 6m being one prime example, and that's all they're interested in doing. So license numbers really don't tell the whole story so to speak.

Nothing ventured nothing gained. Also a spectrum protection/replacement bill has been introduced in congress again this year. Last year it had a significant number of supporters and who knows maybe this year it may get passed due to the positive exposure Ham Radio is getting with the disaster relief efforts in the Gulf area.

Yeah, those Nextel's with the copyrighted "PTT" feature are nothing more that a pay for use handie talkie. Tell somebody that the next time they say something stupid about oh "two-way radios" still being sold comment. Ask them if they knew their Nextel was a "radio". That stub, radio antenna, stiking out of the top isn't intented to pick their nose with, but I'm sure a few retartds do.

ah yes the old snobery rasies it head

so RC users aren't "real Hams" any other folks you want to exclude?

I was talking to whoever it was you want to see it go to in this forum who is not licensed. Why does it need to be transmit modifed so a unlicensed CBer can use it. Why is it superior to a Galaxy if it is not a CBer your talking to.

All I can say is that it was my first true piece of "Ham" gear, and I was in awe of it. Especially since it transmitted 100 watts on SSB (25 watts AM)! :-P I wish the bidder good luck whoever they are, and if someone here gets a hold of it - I doubt they will be disappointed.

Buther Boy

P.S. Mars operators need a license, don't they?

:-D :-P

See, there is a lake, with green vegetation, see why GWB want to go there?
I ain't kidding you not!

Nothing to do with (mars)bars ;-)

I think anytime there is no skip, we should reach to mars with that set...
You just need a good antenna.

That communication deficit is reeling its ugly head again in your comprehension examples. Many cb'ers are licensed and only you appear to be pleasuring yourself with the mention of one who "is not licensed".

Only you hallucinate and see things that aren't there. No one said it -need- be "transmit modified", only you. Try again when you learn to communicate and express yourself a bit more lucidly.

If you can find where I claimed they're not "real Hams" above, well be my nothing? The point about license numbers is they don't tell you a thing about how the bands are used, nor by whom, living or dead.

Forget about the ground plane kit, and put that antenna as high as you

I find right it above my reply, obviously while did not use the phrase real hams you are clearly dismissive over some uses of ham radio whcih amounts to the same thing

so in short you were insulting, without coming close to making your "point"

Hello Brian,

I thought about your situation and have a very inexpensive solution.
Get yourself a SO239 chassis connector, 14 gage wire (50') and soldering gun. In the center solder a 102" length for the vertical element. On each of the 4 corners, solder a 104" groundplane wire.
Attatch your coax to the SO239 and use a nail to support the top of the antenna at the peak of the inside of your crawl space. Allow your gound plane to droop down up to a 45 degree angle. Trim for SWR.
The ground planes will help decouple the RF from getting into the house.
This is not the perfect solution, but it is cheaper than buying a commercial antenna. I found this quick reference for a guide...
http://home.att.net/~wizardoz/cbmw/antenna_fabri.html

Hope this helps...

K1MAN EDITORIAL - ED051010A - AMERICAN AMATEUR RADIO ASSOCIATION

ARRL MEMBERSHIP IS IN FREE FALL AS AARA NIPS AT THEIR HEELS

"The League has mismanaged emergency funds in my opinion," says AARA Executive Director, Glenn Baxter, K1MAN. "If ARRL spent as much effort on emergency communications as they do lobbying against K1MAN's FCC license in Washington, they might have much greater success competing with IARN on the disaster communications front," according to Mr. Baxter. "Their focus seems to be on their dwindling membership," says the leader of the American Amateur Radio Association and arch rival of Newington. www.K1MAN.com

See the attached League articles. (While not yet a radio amateur!)

NEWINGTON, CT, Oct 6, 2005--Sarah Dorsey, a native of West Hartford, Connecticut, is the ARRL's new--and first--Membership Manager. She officially assumed her duties at ARRL Headquarters October 5. Her primary focus will be on developing membership recruitment and retention strategies to increase membership growth. She'll also support member and customer service. WHILE NOT YET A RADIO AMATEUR, Dorsey says she's "absolutely" looking forward to the challenge of her new responsibilities, and a ham radio licensing class is on her short list.

"I enjoy work that is personally meaningful," she said. "I've been fascinated with learning about ham radio operators and the crucial role they played and continue to perform in the rescue and recovery efforts for Katrina and Rita. I look forward to the day when I'll also be able to work side by side with our members."

Dorsey attended Green Mountain College in Vermont and is a graduate of Charter Oak College in Connecticut. Prior to coming to the League, she served as recruitment marketing manager for a non-profit health care services organization in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where she managed recruitment and retention initiatives.

Her professional background also includes management, marketing and recruitment positions in various disciplines of the healthcare and human services markets. Dorsey says she's now ready for a new challenge that requires essentially the same skill set.

ARRL COO Harold Kramer, WJ1B, anticipates that Dorsey's past experience will fold right into the League's goal of boosting membership and retaining current members. "More important, we look forward to her providing even more value and benefits to being an ARRL member," Kramer said. "Sarah will become a very visible part of the ARRL team at hamfests and conventions, and she is looking forward to meeting many of our members and prospective members."

ARRL Sales and Marketing Manager Dennis Motschenbacher, K7BV, earlier this year announced the search for a Membership Manager to target membership recruitment and retention. He says having Dorsey on board in that role is part of an overall strategy to "look beyond many of the League's current organizational paradigms regarding membership."

Dorsey recalled occasionally driving past the Maxim Memorial Station W1AW building while growing up in the Greater Hartford area. "That little brick building is definitely a landmark," she remarked, adding that she never anticipated one day working on behalf of Amateur Radio at ARRL Headquarters. "Now everywhere I go, I'm starting to notice antennas!"

Doubtful. The only time that moniker legitimately appeared in other radio groups was to let the amateur world know Leland C. Scott, KC8LDO was forging and pretending to be Twistedhed. The late, great Dick McCollum N0BK first pointed this out and Leland attacked him on another subject, claiming Dick was sore about a previous disagreement they had and was falsely accusing Leland becase of it. This was one of many of Leland's low points in life, as not one person in this world who knew Dick would characterize him as one who would stoop to false accusations, as Leland didn't simply claim Dick might have made a mistake, Leland attacked Dick and accused him of a retributional act for something that took place only in Leland's mind.

BUT, once those who were familiar with Leland's posting history considered the source (Leland) of such a malicious allegation against Dick, there was no longer any question by anyone what happened. Leland got caught by Dick, Dick pulled Leland up by his ears for his behavior, and Leland commenced to react against Dick. Story of Leland's life..act out against those you can't hold your own against, and anonymously harass them if you can get away with it. He didn't. :)

This is the sort of attitude you get off many of the "older" hams and those with nothing interesting to say but want to be heard. So much debate over something that means nothing just for the sake of it. No wonder so many people are put off Amateur and decide to stick to CB. You would have thought the "old school" would invite newer members into their ranks with open arms then "encorage" them in productive ways... not moan and winge and ridicule. Superior operators do not make superior beings.... far from it...

This runs on Linux any one want to make a windows version?)
http://panteltje.com/panteltje/cb/

Now it can also play sound files, and you can set for each file if it is played as for example a roger beep, or lead-in (station identification?)

Also added a way to make echo in case your set does not have it.

In fact I have found some nice beep wave files on the windows disk, animals... sound of thunder.. good music too of cause ..

The other feature is that you can use the mouse as transmit button, this is nice while using the headset and PC.

Yeah, and Santa Claus ate the cookies too. Lightning will take whatever path is there no matter how complex. It will go right through your gas discharge and Cyberpower UPS.
Remember this spark has just traveled several miles to get to you. A few inches of gas or plastic isn't even going to slow it down.

I completely agree with Kevin. The only benefit these extra gadgets have is if there is a close strike and it helps to reject stray voltage from the bolt. Ive had two TV sets go down due to this, you can tell the difference... the stray voltage from a bolt of lightning will pop components on a board... a direct hit will make it explode... The only way to protect your equipment is to disconnect it AND either move the co-ax away or the radio itself. It doesnt help much disconnecting it and leaving it an inch from the radio.

Hello,
OK... This is a library check. I'm seeking a service manual for the SBE Console V. As far as I can tell, there wasn't a SAMs Photofact made for this unit. I have a mint condition unit that I'm going to service and would like to have the proper documentation to work from.
I have done a google search already and have come up with nothing. Any suggestions to obtaining this information is greatly appreciated.
Thanks a head of time & 73

That's why it's nice to have another radio/band to use.
CB is dead around here. SSB is another matter. It's alive!

2 meters is always busy. It has a lot of the old CB'ers on it, and the current CB'ers that are sick of the noise and bleedover.

CB is AM. 11 meters is sideband. Totally different.
Find me on 36 USB or someplace simplex on 2 meters.

and your misconception is that cbers want to make the transition to amateur freqs. 11 meters is mostly a ssb mode though i've worked montserrat on fm which is a rarity. cb is mostly am except for 36-39 and in the old days 13 & 16 at least here on the island.
you sound like a typical imperial amateur. and i use the word 'amateur'

Baxter owns all you fruits. Thousands of kilohertz to play

There are no "Baxters" on CB, because they are ignored. You

A few CB'ers do want to make the transition to Amateur frequencies and they do move on to Amateur. Thats where a lot of your stock from the late 70's/80's/90's originated from. They had a dabble on CB, enjoyed it then progressed further. Also CB is definately not just AM, CB is anything using the CB frequencies. Not necessarily legally used granted. CB in the UK is FM... that doesnt make it something other than CB..

Hahaha! Some people's children can't be educated or reasoned with. No matter how many times you tell a certain faction there is no such thing as bad publicity, there will be those who insist it is their duty to try and slander, libel, or otherwise malign those with whom they do not agree. As you astutely noted, this has the opposite effect more often than not. I never knew about the dude's program or even heard of him until I saw some washed up old farts crying about his content in this group. That's when I tuned in to find out what the hell this dude was saying that was causing (controlling) a few people to react so profoundly.
Whether you are pro or con concerning this Baxter dude, he speaks the truth of the ARRL. The ARRL has become one of the longest running jokes in amateur radio and I do believe his loudest critics are culled right from the belly of this impotent, dying beast.

actually, it was him who decided to play in OUR sandbox.

his claims to ownership of specified ham radio frequencies for the purposes of his "bulletins" are without merit.

OTOH, W1AW is a historic station (one of the first on the air), has been doing the same thing for nearly a century and predates most of the modern rules (thus it is grandfathered). However, they had no pecuniary interest, often promoted ham radio and provided a means for "over the air training".
I do not see K1 MAN doing any such thing.

In fact, U have heard 'MAN on the air a few times over the last decade or so and I was always left with a bad feeling in my ears and a question: why is this idiot even on the sir?".

so, there you have it. enough of your whining, complaining and crying. he is done. he is gone. now live with it and move on.

And then there's the proximity factor...namely, every piece of wire in your home acting as the other half of a transformer, the lightning being the primary. Induced voltages are just as deadly to electronics.

Follow your own advice, clueless fruit ham. You have been whining, complaining, and crying about Baxter for years, in order to fill the voidless nothing in your worthless life.

TURN THE LARGE CENTER DIAL ON YOUR FUCKING
RADIO next time you hear Baxter.

YOU FUCKING MORON!

ARRL = American Radio Ripoff League

Keep sending in your annual dues suckers.

ARRL is a bigger enemy of ham radio than the FCC.

Never had the opportunity to skip talk to America on FM. I did it a couple of times on SSB on the triple 5 but mainly on FM we just seem to get some parts of Europe. There was some sporadic E a few months back where all parts of the UK were coming in, it was amazing ands it was like talking to someone down the road 30 plus both ways on only 4w. I live in Skegness which is on the East cost of the UK and i was copying Swansea (bottom of Wales, west UK) so your talking a good couple of hundred miles at least. I remember back in 81 when we were given the UK frequencies on FM and everyone thought it would be crap and extremely short wave, basically cup and string jobs. How wrong we all were. Id never go back to mid block AM because all we would hear during the daytime would be 9 pound of Italians. Do you ever use the channel 19 USB on double low? The frequency escapes me but a few years back this was one of the channels i used to listen to and you had more chance of a decent copy as a lot couldnt get down there and it wasnt as packed as the triple 5.

Graham

Nope! But I'm sorry you have such a poor self image or are so insecure

I used to try FM, when I tried out a President Jackson. But the bandwidth spread caused other cb-ers to find me and complain that i was bleeding over on them (was using stock power too). But, unlike some here, I never was able to manage a skip contact on FM...just SSB.

I used to be a member of the TransAmerica Sideband club, which monitored 27.575LSB Been over 5 years, and I hear that it's gone now.

Thanks for the feedback on the basement channels, and for the opinions on the attic channels too.

Hi: Are you saying IRC as Internet? I forget the servers now but there were bunches of them not too long ago. Compuserve use to have CB. I use to use a cool IRC program called mIRC. It's probably still around. It had a list of servers and you can download channel lists and search for CB. The lists were thousands of 'channels' long..

got a general questions about antennas. please excuse my ignorance but i am new to this hobby. when we were kids my dad had a small base station set up to an antron 100 antenna and i remember being able to talk to school friends whose fathers had base stations miles and miles across town. i recently inherited this exact same antenna, set it up, and it does not seem to be able to pull in anything over about a mile. can an antenna go "out of tune" so to speak? i hooked up my cheapo radio shack whip to the same rig and it worked wayyyyy better. any advice? thanks in advance!

Sure it can be out of tune. If it is the same antenna it now has a few more years of corrosion on it, so start by taking it down, disassembling it, and clean every electrical connection. Check the coax you used for a shorted connector and for continuity or lack of continuity between the center conductor and the shield. Borrow an swr meter, and make any adjustments necessary to flatten the reflected power around channel 20.
It should work.

thanks for the reply. i will indeed take it down tomorrow and clean the electrical connections. my dad kept it pretty clean, though... it looked really good when i got it. the coax cable is brand new so i don' think that's the problem. i do have an swr meter, but i just can't figure out how to use it. the instructions that came with it from radio shack are pretty cryptic. it says for whips you need to clip off part of it in 1/4 inch sections to tune it. how do you make adjustments to a large 3-section antenna? thanks!

HI, don't assume the coax is good even if it is new. Check the center to center, ground to ground and center to ground with an ohm meter.
Getting new bad coax does happen!!!
Also, when you tried the whip, did you use the same coax?? If so, then the coax might be OK.

205. Wilson 5000 or Wilson 5000 Trucker?

I doubt that I will be able to put up a dipole in my living room, and I've got just enough room in the corner where my radio is located, so I am wondering if I can put up one or the other of these antennas. I have a Wilson 5000, which I sometimes use when I'm mobile, and I'm able to talk skip with that (which will be my goal in this application). Any thoughts or ideas on installation? How would I ground this thing? Wilson 5000 or Wilson 5000 Trucker? I'm still reading to find out which gets the better results, and that would be the one I would want.

Thanks.

For the "5000", there are three variations (not including the Wilson 5000 Trucker). Here they are:

Roof Top
Trunk Lip
Magnet Mount

http://www.wilsonantenna.com/w5000.htm

Which one (I'm thinking about the magnet mount, but what would I connect it to), and how would I make this work?

counterpoise would be most appreciated.

Just say 'No" to clipp;ing anything until you locate the resonant frequency of the antenna or have a good idea where it is on the spectrum. The higher the frequency, the shorter the antenna needs to be, hence those stubby little things on police cars because they are operating at very high frequency. If you are shooting for Channel 19 for example, it is 27.185 MHz. If the antenna swr is flat at 28 MHz, then th antenna is too short and needs to be lengthened. If the swr is flat at 27 MHz, then the antenna is too long and needs to be shortened.
Sometimes it can be hard to add stuff back on, so be careful about cutting anything until you are certain.

Can you put it in the attic? If so, you could possibly construct a groundplane to mount the antenna on. A large peice of metal would probably act like a car body to mount the antenna to. Another possiblility would be to put the antenna up in the corner as you want with several groundplane radials (9ft long) running along the floor.

Ok this is easy enough, take a small aluminum step stool, put a mirror mount on it and you will work fine.
Or, put the antenna in the corner, take two eight wires and run them from the corner along the wall.
The wires go to the shield side of the coax.
Do you need a Wilson ? it is just a shortened 1/4 wave that is not as efficient.
Can you use a regular 8 ft whip?
You could tilt it out 45 degrees when you operate.
With skip, cross polarization is not a issue.
If you use a dipole that is horizontal it would be best for skip. You would be 18 dbi down when working other locals that are vertical.
You would get a little gain out of it over the wilson.
If you need to use a tuner, The station on the other end will never know the difference
Good Luck, Dan

I've gotten great results with the Wilson 5000 while mobile with 100 watts SSB. The dipole would be the best bet, but I don't know how I can do it. I'm on the bottom floor in the living room, and the attic is far away. Also, the wall that I would use is about 8 ft. tall and 16-18 feet wide. What would you suggest there?

Hello MDW:

Yeah I am sure it would heat up a radio room on a cold night.

Man look at the price this old KW amp is going for, 3300 American Dollars, TILT!

The amp shouldn't draw that much juice, since its only a stock ham band amp.

I worked on a amp that used two each 3CX300A7 Tubes, for Spectral Analyst, a tool in mining. It drew an RF Arc, in a special chamber, and the spectral light was looked and photographed by a optical analyzer, that gave out the content for the material being tested. And it didn't draw that much power, it didn't trip the 40 amp circuit bearkers that supplied the 220 volts power to it. After the testing I plugged the clothes dryer back in.

It just drew a lot of current when it was in transmit operation, but that was just for a short while. So it didn't take a lot of juice for a long period of time. But if it did that would be expenive. Kind of like when the kid left his electric ceiling heater on for a few days.

Or the air compress runs open loon for a few days, because the air hose leaks.

Edison isn't too bad. But they got upset when I disabled there power lock out assembly, when they locked out my power, after I paid all the Bills. I handed it back to them at there payment center.

I just got this radio. It is used and modified.

It has a 3 position switch in the back. I am not sure what are the frequencies are.

The fuse in the back is a high number. I am not sure if that is the correct fuse.

The radio can receive without a mic. I need a mic for it. I would like to get a power hand mic but I am not sure which one will work with this 4 pin radio. I do not want to just buy any 4 pin mic.

The s-meter does not move very much. And I am not sure if the NB button was modified for something.

Would the Astatic CB Radio 636 Mic work with this? And is the Astatic CB Radio 636 Mic a power mic?

Thanks, SR

Your "citizen" had a responsibility to obey the laws and regulations applicable to his license grant, and instead he stomped his feet, held his breath, beat his Baxter has acted like a spoiled two-year-old. The FCC was way too patient.

ARRL membership is declining but not due to Glenn Baxter a/k/a AARA a/k/a IARN. Baxter has made only one contribution to ham radio: He has legitimized information bulletins put out by stations other than W1AW.

His other boasts are the sheer fantasy of a guy with a Radio Shack tape recorder fancying himself another CNN.

Up to now, I have not been an ARRL supporter, but I think current circumstances make membership in ARRL mandatory for all of us. That's because the hobby/service has never before been under this much siege on account of the escalating computer revolution.

Whatever you say about the ARRL -- self serving promotion, stacked elections, censorship of views with which it disagrees -- it is, in fact, the only institution positioned to help our hobby/service survive intact.

Today it has my vote and soon my membership dollars. Rather than tilt against ARRL, I believe it is time to work within the organization to make it the democratic institution we'd all like to see.

Jon,
When checking a coax with an ohm meter. With the coax disconnected on both ends, measure from shield to ground. This must be an infinity reading. Now measure the center conductor end to end. This shouldn't be over a couple ohms at the most. The same for the shield measurement. If you have a dummy load, connect it to one end and you should read around 52 ohms with the meter. It's best to do that from both ends to ensure the connectors are good. The only way better to test is with either a megger or a TDR <time Domain Reflectometer>.
If you have you atenna connected, you'll find that with most fiberglass base antennas, you'll have a reading from 40 - 150 ohms do to the tuning curcuit inside the antenna.
I hope this helps a little.....

Set the meter on ohms. You should get infinity between the center conductor and ground. You should get a reading very close to zero when checking ground to ground or center to center.
On your previous post on swr meter use, place in line close to radio. Place switch to for, key mic and adjust to where it says cal, the switch it to ref. That will give you your swr reading.

Not a problem, I paid all my bills so they didn't have a leg to stand on. I and they knew it.

Yeah disconnecting my power at the pole would have done it. But they would have had to "Hi Occo" it back the next day any way.

I had leg surgery back in the 80's. I went down to a welding supply shop to buy a new set of bottles, torches, and regulators, at half price. Hobbling around on Crutches.

I stooped off by the office at work to give them some papers. When I hobbled back to the truck, they put on a metal restraining bar on my front tire. Well with a new set of Cutting Torches, Bottles, and such, I made quick work of their metal restraining bar. Leaving it there in a pile of rubble, not in premium shape, I laughed all the way home. Besides I was parked in a legal parking place.

Somethings ya wish ya had a picture of.

Small correction:
There is a difference between 'rsistance' and 'impedance'.
For example when I measure the 'resistance' (with the Ohm meter) from my 1/2 wave GPA, I measure a dead short.
This is because there is a little transformer in it, you measure the Ohms of the wire in the primary.
the impedance however is around 50 Ohms (I would hope).

There is a simple way to measure impedance too, in a bridge:
http://web.telia.com/~u85920178/antennas/bridge.htm

The reason is that for DC a transformer is almost dead short....

Keep sending in your annual dues suckers.
ARRL is a bigger enemy of ham radio than the FCC.

The number of licensed who -don't- belong to the league might almost be taken as the number who think your way. Many agree with you.

(shrug) Fantastic. The only thing better than the public having free (?) access to the spectrum is your right to slam it or agree with it or whatever the hell you will. But when you censor something or agree with this type censoring, you partake of ignorance.

It's dead in the water. There will be the ever so slightest spectrum reserved for what you will, and the ARRl or anybody else aren't going to change it. What..you thought maybe the ARRL would get you more spectrum?

Jay,

Not that you are a bad customer as far as the electric utility is concerned, but here in Texas we have 48 hours to reconnect a customer after they pay...and sometimes, we do make them wait 47 if they have been too much of a pain. Of course, we only do that because we are so backlogged. :-) And that usually fixes the problem. You don't know how much you depend on electricity until you don't have it.

269. Maco m103 at 45 deg

Anyone ever try mounting a m103 at 45 deg.? Seems that when shooting skip, the polarization gets tossed around from reflection and I find myself swiching back and forth from the imax to the maco(flat side) while talking to get the best reception while chatting with the same station. Just wanted to know if anyone has ever tried this, and what the results were. I know you can get dual polorized beams, but curious if this has worked for anyone. Thanks, Bill well the SVRC had about 100 members at the time but when I stod for president NOT one of them was willing to take the job. prehaps the greatest greatest achievement of term of Office was inspire a couple of the old timers to stop resting on their laurels

I know a great deal about it. I just don't agree with your assesment

K1MAN is appreantly an unpleasent fellow, possibly a mental case, but only the alleged interference in emergency comms seem to be very serious to me

I have read the endless trashing of this man and I say where's the beef. I would not be inviting K1MAM over to my place but that is a long way from throwing him out of the ARS, after I would not invite you over

I have a nice looking 20 year old Cobra148 GTL in the trunk of my car.
It has been bouncing around in there for ten years or so.

What is the difference between it and the new one coming back on the

So why did someone pull the story off the Internet about the NO police shooting and killing five contractors who were walking on a bridge? I heard they were trying to sabotage up the levee? Then they said it was five looters about an hour later. Then the story disappeared. See the Guardian link below. It can't be found at any American websites

I saw it online and the evening news then the story totally disappeared.

What are folks hiding here? I even heard the Mayor say he probably was a walking dead man. What was he afraid of?

Hello U-K-W:

I am sure they could have taken their sweet time, but I reconnected it myself. They had a lock out bar over the main breaker. That was easy to remove, with Mr. Hack Saw.

Yes I have to agree with you there about missing the electric power. I have looked into low voltage, battery systems for remote places that don't have electric power run to them. I keep on coming up with a gas or disle generator.

One guy I work with, we have priced out different power systems and such for his remote home in the Seria Mountains. After years of running a gas generator, and charging batteries and such. He was able to have Edison run in a power poles and a step down transformer for under 5000 dollars, which we figured to be cheap, as compared to all the other ways of getting power to the house.

Now he can run a big linear.

Hello Bill:

Yes the polarity changing from vert to horz and back happens all the time. I would see this with my 4 element Moonraker Beam, having to switch back and forth from vert to horz to hear the skip station.

It might be a good call to at least try and see what differences you see with the MaCo 103 at a 45 degree angle. Maybe not a hole lot??!?!

The Quad Beam Antennas have two elements in the vertical polarity and two elements in the horizontal polarity, per quad loop element. So they should not be so picky in transmitting or receiving either polarity.

Cubex makes a quad for the CB Band, they are at:

Evacuees binge on Cape: Spend Federal cash on booze, strippers
By Maggie Mulvihill and Dave Wedge
Tuesday, October 18, 2005 - The Boston Herald

BOURNE - Hurricane Katrina evacuees hastily handed $2,000 in federal relief money last month have been living it up on Cape Cod, blowing cash on booze and strippers, a Herald investigation has found.
Herald reporters witnessed blatant public drinking at a Falmouth strip mall by Katrina victims living at taxpayer expense at Camp Edwards on Otis Air Force Base.

Strippers at Zachary's nightclub in Mashpee, a few miles from the Bourne base, report giving lap dances to several evacuees.
``They were tipping me $5 a pop,'' said a Zachary's dancer named Angel. ``I told them I felt bad taking their money. But I still took it.'' Another dancer said a large group (of BLACK Katrina evacuees) from the military base was in Zachary's recently and she gave lap dances to several of the victims. ``Some spend good money, but others don't,'' she said.

Hello Jeff:

I haven't ever heard of a Anton 100 Antenna. But I have heard of a Antron A99 Antenna.

I have seen where the coax has come lose from the matching coil inside the bottom fiberglass section in a few rare cases.

If there is no continuity (less that a few ohms of resistance) between the antennas SO-239 connector, center and outside of the connector, there is a good chance something has come lose or is even burned up.

But I think new Antron A99 Antennas are only 60 dollars.

Good luck.

I have spent quite a bit of time in the last several weeks trying to come up with a solution for talking skip in a town home area. Well, I think I got it figured out... Maybe any way. :-)

I ordered the Imax 2000, based on several eham reviews and in particular, the reviews of N0VZ and WB2YIP:
http://www.eham.net/reviews/detail/1376?page=3

It would seem that I could theoretically get away with installing the Imax 2000 at my town home on PVC piping in a 5 gallon cemented bucket.

So there you have it!

Hello Buther Boy:

Using PVC Pipe as a mast is not a good idea. It was not made to have any shear strength.

Using the 1 1/4 inch diameter steel mast that is sold as a mast will work much better. They come in 5 and 10 foot lengths. And have a swagged or reduced end to allow another 1 1/4 inch pipe to fit over it, and make it longer.

Maybe a 1 1/4 inch pipe in a 5 gallon bucket, with cement, and temporally attached and tied off to the side of the house will appear to be a temporary antenna.

Good Luck!

They may look similar but the insides are completely different and the UK ones are very easily expanded to cover over 10 blocks with just a solder blob. The Nightwatch ones whole front panel illuminates in the dark and looks quite swish.... I dont think much of the soundtracker system though unless the few ive owned have just been bad.

Umm,,no. Some forums, although public, are moderated, preventing you from speaking said opinions, much in the same manner some of the ARRL some still can't understand it or flat out refuse to acknowledge it.

Congrats, I really enjoy my Imax 2K. I would not use PVC, Gas pipe is cheap and easily threadable. You can add sections if you want. Some have used large flower pots filled with concrete and attached the mast to the house. If you plan on re-locating this would seem ideal for your situation.

In certain States, your language in a public forum is a violation of law. That's not being prudish. It is a violation of law.

I am not running amuck. Your foul mouth is running amuck.

If you had any understanding at all regarding childhood development you

Be careful, your language can get you in trouble.

You continue to confuse censorship and civility, Mark.

One can effectively express themselves without having to resort to gutter mouth adjectives.

No, the issue is foul language that's not necessary to get a point across.

And yet another example of why licensure for procreation should be

Hi all,
I'm a novice who needs some advice.

I've just purchased a Cobra 148 GTL to put in my Dodge RAM 1500 conversion van, and I'm having some trouble trying to figure out what kind of antenna to mount on it.

I would have preferred a magnetic base as I don't want to advertise the fact I have a CB on board, but as the only flat place to put it on is the roof I figured that wouldn't be a decent option, not unless I want to have the antenna smashed around everytime I go through a drive through facility or car park! That or I mount a 1' antenna on the base!

A couple of CB shops have suggested different alternatives for using a spring-mounted stainless steel whip antenna set up on the rear bumper. Does this sound the best option?

As many of the people who frequent this forum obviously know their stuff I wanted to ask if people here would like to make any suggestions on which combination of base/spring/antenna would work best for me on the van? If it helps any the comination would have to be over 54 inches in height to clear the roof line.

One last point. As the top of the bumber has a plastic cover over the steel I'll need to ground the unit through it. Is there a reccomended way of doing this for an antenna?

Thanks in advance.....Tim

Kinda tough to run 4 tons of AC on a car battery.

I was elected VP one then the next stood for the vacant office of president, by the failure of the former president to either show up or resign I was elvated to acting president per the by laws

no some did commet on how awfull it was that a NCT was to hold the job, but most of the unwilling did not even attened to meeting for the election at all

not exactly the man who werved as my VP ran for president (un opposed) but a number of the OTS became a lot more active, from what I hear (unconfirmed rumour of course what they had expected was for the election commitee to come begging one of them to take the office of president, did not work out that way and they got their "panties in not realy Stevie boy the "feces" just doesn't carry the same impact as the "shit", the same for other word pairs of course applies. If one is barred from the use the word "Shit" then one is barred from the full use of langauge, and proper comincation is thereby thwarted

I agree that over use of such words as "shit", "Fuck" etc do dimish the impact

I think it will be to tall for a 5 gallon bucket. It might tip. Get the gas pipe

I think that many great writers would disagree with you..... Salinger, Updike, Pynchon, Steinbeck.... just to name a few. Even your personal favorite -- Tom Clancy -- used profanity in his work. The fact is that some concepts can -only- be expressed with "gutter mouth adjectives".
Be that as it may, any limitation of vocabulary is, by definition, a limitation of communication.

I'm looking for an original manual (or quality copy) for the Heathkit GW-22A c.b. radio. Do you have one that you can part with, or let me borrow to make my own copy of?

Yes, I'm aware of the MANY on-line vendors who sell manuals, but I'm just not interested in paying $20 plus postage for a photocopy. I'm hoping that one of my fellow radio enthusiasts will have the manual and be willing to help me out. That's what we used to do... before it became all about the money.

AC is measured in Watts, 4 kW?
100A/h 12V battery, 70 % efficiency converter 1200 x .7 = 840 W/h available AC.
So 840 / 4000 = .21 hours = 12.6 minutes.

Thanks, everyone, for the input! If my situation allowed me to transport my antenna setup the three hour distance I'm going to be traveling in my car, I would easily choose the 1 1/4 masting you've all mentioned. I think, in the meantime, I will have to go with the following setup that (again) N0VZ, tried and tested. I would prefer what you guys have discussed but I don't know anyone locally that could pitch in.

Many thanks, guys!

Buther Boy

N0VZ:
I took a 5 gallon plastic bucket and placed a 2 foot piece of schedule 40, 1 1/4 inch PVC in the middle and cemented the pipe in. I mounted the Imax 2000 on a 3 foot piece of 1 inch galvanized pipe that easily slides inside the PVC. This base is stable enough to support the antenna as long as it doesn't get really windy (over 50 mph).

Hope to catch you on the air.

327. Grounding or Counterpoise Imax 2000

Here's a question that I'm a bit unsure about. I could use a 9 foot piece of wire for a counterpoise that would be resident on 27.000 MHz.
The problem is, I don't know where to connect this wire to ON the antenna. I haven't gotten the antenna yet, but perhaps some of you already have experience with the Imax 2000.

Also, if I can't use the counterpoise, should I just plan on planting a steel rod into the ground with a random length of wire attached to the steel rod and the antenna, in order to ground it?

Thanks,
Buther Boy

With you around it sure isn't necessary. And I should mention a word about your abyssmal grammar or mad spelling skills, Cletus. It'd take an army of thousands to keep up with and make note of your daily butchery of my beloved English language. If you can't handle a critique of your dreadful writing, just go ahead and open your wrists with a razor blade and end your torment. It's a text forum, you imbecile. The only way to judge anyone here is by the words they offer. It's always the subliterates like yourself that maintain the opinion that shitty writing is something other than the barometer of one's stupidity that it clearly is. You'd love to pretend that I'm nitpicking over the occasional typo or misspelling of a word as you attempt to draw attention away from my accurate assessment of your abortion of a post a few lines up. Watching you try to form compound sentences is a painful excercise.

There appears to be a partial refund of my purchase price/shipping price coming back to me via paypal. I guess it must be shipping. It was purchased via the ebay store: Elkin Electronics for $79.95.

I will let you know how it performs next week (when it's up) !!

Learn to read, jackass. I critique your "writing" (and I use the term loosely) in every post, stupid. You consistently prove you are an illiterate jackass in every post. And I'm not the only person to notice it, either.

I can fine but where is the litery critque in "Hopefully, it'll <aids> kill a self admitted queer named Marky."

which was the sum total of your post in that case

I know plenty about you

I thank the Gods I don't know you personaly

I know that you a sick fucked frieghten excuse for a person a person whose life is lived in fear, and likely does even know exactly what he is afraid of you show volumes about yourself in almost every post (the exceptions are the one liners of course) you are a coward likely a closet Homosexual yourself, or at least strongly uncertian in your own sexuality, and so you are frightened of someone that knows exactly who and what they are. The fact I have so little fear of being forced to conform also seems to upset you, even makes you envious of my nerve (it is really nerve involved just a clam acceptance of reality and the influence of my deeply held religous base)

no a Sadist would think so as well

most persons into S&M would be delighted to learn they can cause pain just by writing and I am into S&M and I delight in the knowledge that I am able to inflict pain on you and for that matter Dan, Dave, Stevie as well, without realy trying

Take VK's WIA for example.

Until this year, each state was it's own body with a person from each state representing said state at the Federal level. The Eastern States, with more money, assets and power had started to effect the other states. Individual hams used to belong to thiner state division only, with each state division then having representation at a Federal level. Now every ham who joins the WIA has voting rights with the WIA.

For example, in the past if I was a WIA Member and wanted something changed it had to go through the VK3 WIA Council who then (if they wanted to that is) proposed it at the next Federal meeting. Now, I can put an item on the agenda of any WIA meeting and have my say.

Thanks to many dedicated hams with a vision, this was scrapped last year and a new WIA was formed. Thanks to them ham radio may survive well into the 21st century. Now each state simply has an advisory committee with no real power over amateur radio, other than advising the National WIA. Many states transferred their assets to the new National body, but those that like playing politics and who are on power trips said "no" we aren't giving our state's money to help out another state. It seems those formerly in power in VK3 & VK2 don't want to help hams in say, VK8.

In the past, VK2WIA and VK3WIA held most of the country assets and really controlled the WIA, with the other states missing out. In VK2 and VK3 we had people (VK's will know whom I mean) who were much more interested in controlling assets and playing politics than promoting amateur radio. In VK2 and VK3 they were more interested in keeping their assets (buildings, towers etc) than forming a National WIA. Now that other states have closed up their WIA Divisions, their funds were transferred to the National WIA. But not in VK2 or VK3 where those who used to run the Divisions wanted to keep control, so whilst VK6, VK7, VK1, all now gave up their power and money, the future politicians in VK2 and VK3 decided to keep their assets seperate.

Why all states didn't transfer their funds to the National WIA is simply becuase their are power-hungry future politicians in VK2 and VK3 and din't want their funds to say, pay for a new repeater in Alice Springs.

Now, VK3WIA is simply "Amateur Radio Victoria" and VK2WIA is "AR NSW" who like to think they are still a powerful force, but in reality are simply now building and tower owners who run a QSL buro.

The original idea of the new WIA was to simply have local clubs and one national WIA, with the clubs being affiliated with the WIA and providing former State division services. Every state except VK2 & VK3 disbanded their former WIA State Division and transferred all to the National WIA. So now in VK2 or VK3 you have clubs, a pretend state division and the National WIA.

One hopes that many hams will join the National WIA and local clubs as these former state divisions serve no real purpose to amateur radio anymore, some just wish they did.

Other states WIA sensibly chose to transfer their assets to the new National WIA and now cease to exist. (VK6WIA for instance, has closed down and given control to the National WIA, as has VK7, VK1). But in NSW (VK2)and Vic (VK3) it was too much for those with political aims to transfer their assets to the National WIA.

So now, in VK2 and VK3 we have two bodies who were former WIA State Divisions which are now nothing more than a radio club.

I have only been licensed since January, but watching these changes as they occur.

Do the maths. Every other President and Committee in every other Aussie State said "Yes we will disbanded and form the new national WIA" (hams interested in the betterment of amateur radio in VK) but the President and Committee of VK2 & VK3 said "We will join...but we won't be closing ourselves down or transferring assets to the National WIA, we'll just change our name" (hams training to be future politicians.

So whilst the ARRL may not be what everyone wants or needs, it IMHO would be better to keep it and effect changes from within.

An recent example of VK3 wishing it still was a powerful WIA branch can be seen in a recent article by it's President, who stated that the new Standard Licencees (former Novices) would not be allowed to use SSTV when the regulations change. Yet, the new regulations now clearly state "Any emission mode with a bandwidth <8kHz". Which means we can use SSTV now. You'd think the President of AR Victoria would get the facts before making such statements on AR Newsline!

This was misinformation from the "President?" of AR Victoria. Seems he was more interested in making false statements about SSTV than promoting amateur radio.

The ARRL is pretty good, all thing considered.

I am a member of two radio clubs and the WIA, but hell will freeze over* before I join AR Victoria and would encourage any VK hams to join the WIA and a local club, not a state-based division as they no longer have any real power (ie they don't deal with 'our FCC' (ACMA) anymore on a state-by-state basis, it's done at a National level by the WIA)

PS. The VK Foundation Licence and new amateur regs are now in effect.

My dearest fellow underaged child lover,

I am a fan of child pornography and for the past 14 years,I have been able to gather quite a collection of it.
I have pictures, VHS tapes, posters, audio recordings, and games based on child pornography.

I am selling my products (or trading for other child pornography).

I have a complete color catalog of all products now available. You can purchase pictures (both normal kodak and computer JPEG's). Also, you can purchase posters, VHS tapes, used boys underwear, and audio recordings.

There are many products and services. Here are some prices:

Complete Color Catalog (160 pages).....$5.00
100 Pictures Little boys age 7-12.....$9.95
120 Pictures Little boys age 13-17.....$11.95
VHS tape, little boys "Bath Time for Uncle Lloyd".....$49.95
VHS tape, little boys "Happy B-day, Uncle Lloyd".....$49.95
VHS tape, teenage boys "Naked Pizza Party!".....$49.95
Personalized Audio tape.....$2.99

If you have child pornography, preferably little boys ages 7-9, I will trade or buy them from you. If they are action shots, of an adult with a little boy having sex, I am willing to trade big, or pay you a lot.
Please write to me for more details. Thanks.

You can send cash, checks, or money orders made out to FUN WITH CHILDREN.

Please send your order to:

Looks like a death trap. No protection over the HV area, and ONLY! two 813 Tubes, Might be good for only 700 -800 Watts out if ran properly.
Besides, 813s WILL NOT work on 11 or 10 Meters, 20 meters at the best.

My mistake, he says three tubes Owell good for 900-1100 watts.
813 are NOT huge tubes.

Looks like a pair of 813's on the modulator deck and what might be a 4-400A or 4-1000A on the RF deck. Assuming the latter, and running Class C AM, it should be good for much more than a kilowatt.

BTW, the 813 is rated for full power up to 30 MHz and several project articles have been written about amps that run them at 10m. One local CBer here built an amp using a pair of them and gets 600+ watts.

I'm good to go! We can weather storms a bit better than our sister states along our Gulf..maybe that's because of the building codes here or maybe that's because Floridians have been dealing with hurricanes ever since they used to lash themselves and family members to palm trees so they wouldn't blow away. It always seems to be the yankees on the televison crying about how they lost their overpriced mansion on the water. Mother nature has a funny weeding process concerning the cleansing of her shores. As long as people continue to build on wetlands and destroy the natural barrier islands and sawgrasses, they deserve what mother nature tosses their way. If they have the money to continue rebuilding, fine, but I don't believe these folks should qualify for a single penny in aid.

I recently picked up a TRC-431 that had D506 and D507 removed as part of the modulation mod. I would like to undo this so I can troubleshoot some issues but can not find any info on what type of diodes need to be reinstalled. The original diodes were totally cut out so I am stuck without a schematic. Any help would be appreciated.
Thanks!

Interesting point. In regards to Katrina, only 1/3 of the people that were affected by the storm, had flood insurance. 1/3 seems like an interesting figure as well. Do you think that 1/3 is high, low, or right on? I am wondering if the 1/3 of individuals/families that had flood insurance are even going to get paid by the insurance companies; and with that, just who will be eligible for rebuilding money from the govt.?

Just some thoughts I've had lately.

371. Transmitting speech and music with high dynamic range (technical Linux).

Some play music CDs ... so.. these often have 80 dB dynamic range or so...
For those this may be of interest.
Transmitting speech and music with high dynamic range.
Since the dynamic range of the transmission channel is likely limited, we can use a compander.
In the old days there was a chip: Philips NE570.
These days we have the 'sox' program 9in Linux), it has a compand option.
I took the datasheet from the NE570, copied the curve to sox parameters:
-80,-40,-60,-30,-40,-20,0,0 (sox can only go to 0dB)
Then I took the CCIT recommendation for telephone from the NE570 application note, CCIT attack time: 3+-2ms, release time: 13.5+-9ms:
0.003,.013.5
Now I could make a compander program for wave files:

```
sox example.wav example_companded.wav compand \
0.003,.013.5 -80,-40,-60,-30,-40,-20,0,0 1

Most of it will now be at the same level!
If you have 2 soundcards you could pipe the output of xpvox through this into the other dsp device, and have your mike companded too!
If not then you can pre-process your waves or mp3 (make a wave with mpg123 -w xxx.wav xxx.mp3).

You can get the binary packages at the following URL so you don't have to down load source and compile it. Look towards the bottom of the page.

Who's impersonating a retired Marine Gunnery Sergeant?

No doubt you don't persue that Amateur ticket because those two courts martials carry federal weight...Sure would hate to see your name on one of those public actions from the FCC wherein they revert your application to "pending" status due to "character issues" after they find oout...And Frankie, they WILL find out.

Those of us who Honorably served in the Marines don't have those concerns.

Your twice-court-martialed-in-one-enlistment history proves you to be a liar, a cheat and a coward, Frankie. You swore an oath you wouldn't keep and took the government's money in the process.

There's an "impersonator" here, you lying coward, but it's not me.

It's you.

Because although CBers are in a different intellectual class to Radio Hams, it is neither my wish to insult them nor to enter into a discourse with them.

CBers have the right to besport their habits in the appropriate place as do all the lower classes, which in this context is rrcb (and urrcb).

I have no problem telling anyone about my military career, including to the FCC. The courts-martial weren't serious enough to revoke my security clearance, so I doubt the FCC will have any problem with them. But why are they such a thorn in -your- paw?

Hardly. The first court-martial was the result of a bad decision that I made and I paid for it. And as I explained before, the second was because I stood up to my superiors when they were wrong, an action for which I was vindicated. How does that make me "a liar, a cheat and a coward", Dudly?

Now how did you get your medical discharge upgraded to an honorable with full retirement when you claimed to have served only 18 years?

Actually, they kept -my- money. I signed up on the GJ bonus program

Look little motherf*cker, there are even professors on CB.

I listened when they spoke and followed instructions. Pretty simple, actually.

Kinda like following the instructions of my superiors, and when I thought they were wrong about something, using the proper channels to address them...Not taking matters into my own hands or going about it as I dang well pleased "because I was right"

Had your BEEN the kind of Marine you now perceive yourself as having been YOU'D know THAT.

No, you DIDN'T hold up your "end of the deal".

You swore an oath to not only uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States, but to obey those placed in authority over you.

YOU didn't do that.

At LEAST twice.

Poor try to re-direct and divert attention away from the central theme, that being that you're a liar, a cheat and a coward.

Crude, ineffective, pretty lame, actually.

Probably the same tactics you used to get out of being court martialed twice.

It didn't work then...it didn't work now.

So who gets the money when you pay for the test? And if you reread Twists

Hold about a bit matey boy... Just because someone uses a CB doesnt make them a lower class person or less intellectual than an Amateur radio user. They may have brains far exceeding yours on several topics, just not on radio. Just because you know a bit about radio doesnt make you a higher class of person... IT JUST MEANS YOU KNOW ABOUT RADIO'S..... now try learning common sense, respect for ones fellow man and remember.. Amateur Radio.. Just like CB.. is JUST A HOBBY...
I love the bit though where you say "it is neither my wish to insult them" but you manage to do it anyhow...

Hi, I have my I-Max 2000 mounted on a two inch diameter forty two foot pole. Before that I machined the mounting plate off and fitted the A99 ground plane kit. The base of the I-Max is not round, being oval, so I manufactured a sleeve to allow easy installation of the GP kit. I can report it works extremely well on 12m - 10m and is usuable down to 20m with an internal aatu. Beyond that the performance drops away rapidly although it will match ok down to 80m requiring the likes of the SCC aatu to match on 160m. The Shakespere ABS performs a little better on the ham bands, but the I-Max is better on the 12m - CB - 10m segment. Remember, if you're not worried about it falling down, it's not high enough!

Hi, never use resonant groundplanes causes more problems than most people realise. Grounding, using 4 x 8' ground rods, if possible, spaced about a metre apart helps soak up a lot of noise, try getting the antenna way above all the houshold electrical noise. Also the A99 groundplane kit works well, giving a noticeable improvment on RTX. To fit on the I-Max requires some machine work - see previous post. In design, the I-Max is very similar to the Golden Penetrator from bygone years, being a 6/8 wl and a very good antenna as a result.

Unbeknown to me, this thread had already been cross-posted to the CB groups, and I would have removed that cross-posting had I been aware of it.

In respect of that, I apologise if my remarks have caused any offence to the CB community. However, I do not withdraw my remarks - they are my opinion as to the relative standing of Radio Hams and of CB Radio enthusiasts where the playing-field is that of Radio Hams.

However, having said that, the material quoted below serves, I think, to illustrate quite well the intellectual standing of CB Radio enthusiasts upon which I have commented.....

A while ago I gave several reasons why I'm not getting an amateur license, not the least of which is the holier-than-thou attitude of many hams as expressed in the recent "FAQ" thread. Besides, I've been in the radio field professionally for about 25 years -- getting an AMATEUR license would be a step down.

Use whatever adjectives you like, I'm proud of my military service. In fact, I'm so proud of it that I have publically disclosed many of my experiences, good and bad. I've told of my experiences in garrison, in the field, on float, and in Beirut; on air, land and sea. I have even described some of the radio equipment I worked with. But so far you have done nothing of the sort. You have, time after time, avoided any discussion of such issues, no matter how insignificant. You have also frequently demonstrated your ignorance about many aspects of the USMC that any Marine Gunny (let alone a shitbird PFC) would know, and that -you- obviously -don't-.

Tell ya what, Dudly: Let's both go to a military group and continue this discussion there. You game?

Well you know what, Dudly? I could have gone my entire lifetime without ever mentioning my courts-martial and you would have been none the wiser. But instead I chose to be open and honest about my military service, something that you can't seem to appreciate -or- practice.
Nevertheless, the least you could do would be to address the question with due consideration to my responses; assuming, of course, that you can. If you can't then it's no sweat off my brow as it only continues to demonstrate an infantile attitude that is so uncharacteristic of a retired Marine Gunnery Sergeant.

It's not really that simple, since there is no provision that allows a medical discharge to be changed to an honorable, nor is there one granting retirement status by arbitrarily adding two years not served.
Even if your story -is- true, you short-changed your country, Dudly, and now you are receiving benefits you didn't earn. Now when you accuse -me- of being a cheat and a malingerer..... well, do you know what the term "transference" means?

> Kinda like following the instructions of my superiors, and when I >thought they were wrong about something, using the proper channels to >address them...Not taking matters into my own hands or going about it >as I dang well pleased "because I was right"

If I had done what I "dang well pleased" the court-martial wouldn't have even happened. If given the choice between a)going on a field-op for a week or b)losing your rank, paying a fine and spending a month in the pokey, which would -you- choose?

> Had your BEEN the kind of Marine you now perceive yourself as >having been YOU'D know THAT.

If -YOU- were a Marine then you would know that being a Marine isn't always about following orders like an automaton. It's also about taking some initiative and doing the -right- thing, even if that means sticking your ass in the fire. Yeah, I got burnt, but at least I had the courage to do it. You obviously don't know anything about such things, which is yet another reason to believe that you were never in the USMC (but it -would- explain why you "retired" at a rank no higher than a Gunnery Sergeant -- no guts).

That might be a valid argument if the Corps hadn't reneged on the contract -before- my first court-martial. Try again, Dudly.

The central theme from the beginning has been about you impersonating a retired Marine Gunnery Sergeant. Clearly -you- are using my military record to divert attention away from your pathetic charade.

> Crude, ineffective, pretty lame, actually.

Regardless, you didn't answer the question. And here's another one: "How many Avionics Technicians do fleet units have," Dudly?

You're confused again, Dudly; I didn't get out of -any- court-martial, nor did I ever try.

Ya know, while replying to your post it occured to me that you might actually -enjoy- being publically humiliated. If that's the case then by all means continue with your little game. You just better hope that the -real- Gunny Robeson doesn't find out..... or is daddy dead?

You already did by insisting a different intellectual class exists between the two, although you refrained from expressing your prejudice of preference.
I hunt frequently with a teacher at the University of South Florida and he has a cb in his SUV. Another guy in our hunt club is a "Radio Ham" and never finished high school. On the flip ide, we have a lawyer who is also a local coach who is a licensed Radio Ham and many commercial fishermen use cb. At times the commercial fishermen are bringing in more green than the university professor AND the lawyer put together. Does that in essence make the fishermen of a higher intellect because he can make a better income? No, it certainly doesn't, unless you are of the ilk that measures a man by his monetary worth.

Sorry that a cb'er, possibly an advanced or extra Radio Ham, rained on your parade at some point. Get over it and lose the chip on your shoulder so you can make statements that don't illustrate such ignorance.

Interesting is right. Folks on the water HAVE to have flood insurance here in Florida IF they have a mortgage and they are on the water, doesn't matter if it's the ocean, Gulf, river, pond, stream or creek, it's mandatory. Problem is, the ground here is all sand. Once it sponges all it can hold, the water begins to pool. Add a jammed/backed up/overflowing sewage system or few into the mix and suddenly that inland neighborhood that had no bodies of water anywhere near it is indistinguishable from the flooded beaches, bays, tributaries and other water flooded areas. The homes flood. I'd guess the majority of those inland who flooded had no flood insurance.

Another way the insurance companies put the screws to us is they have separate wind policies and deductibles. If you don't elect to take the wind coverage (an extra expense, and again, many inland AND even here on the coast do not elect it) and you get your roof blown off, tough!

The last straw however, is the scumbags in the insurance industry who still have not paid their policy holders in south Florida from last year's triple dose of hurricanes. There are still plenty of families residing in FEMA provided trailers waiting on their checks from the insurance companies, which leads to the bigger picture of the State Pool Insurance that was created to help those who can't get homeowners or those who are dropped for filing a claim. By default and totally unintentionally, the state backed pool became the single largest insurer in Florida AND the most expensive. They are suffering and have ethical questions and investigations ongoing. Name of the outfit is "Citizen's Insurance" and they are underwritten by the JUA. Google them for some reading into why this state is so screwed up with political hacks and friends of big business and insurance.

still buried in a closet!

Bummer is you can't find the old 5-pin DIN microphones anymore. Plus, the original mike was an electret condensor. All you can find nowaday are dynamic mikes.

Receive with its AGC was the best I ever heard.

I'd hope the new one was as nice as the old.

Well, the the things you don't always here about. The people still living in FEMA tailors is news to me. I wonder how many other people out there are having difficulties that most of us are not aware of. I guess human suffering is clear and evident in the land of the free... even to this day! Technology and medicine are allowing us to live longer lives, but how many of us can afford it?

For instance, I just got out of the VA hospital Tuesday after a several hour stay in the ER. I was required to call the VA before calling 911 if I wanted my ambulance ride "paid for." As a veteran who was disabled while in the service, I am being well taken care of, but it becomes my responsibility to know the ins and outs of what the VA will and will not pay for, and under what circumstances they will do it in.

Luckily, my situation wasn't life and death, but if it had been, calling the VA before calling 911 would be an ethical situation that could result in much debate.

As it stands, and I am working on it this weekend, it will be mounted on a 3 foot galvanized pipe that slides inside a 2 foot piece of PVC that is cemented in a 5 gallon bucket. I read about the installation on eham.net. Seems to be legit as far as installations go, but only at wind speeds of 50 miles or less.

Good enough for the time being...

Well, the Imax 2000 is a 5/8 wave, which I think is what you are referring to. Any way, oh how I wish I was just a few years younger and able to take advantage of the skip craze of the 90's. From what I've heard on the forums, there was plenty of it going around. I did get a chance or two with a Shakespeare big stick, but I think that may have been at the tail end of the skip craze.

One of the things that Stevie (amoug many) is his claim that he repsects honesty

I admit to my disaiblities, and don't deny the personality traits he consider fualts but that isn't good enough for either

you see that one too

But I think you may mistaken if he suffers froma service related dysablity then by having things corrected he would get his pension

but Stevie claims to suffer from my physical or mental disablity

In the realms of talking specifically about radio apology accepted but everyone swears at some time. Amateurs included. While i dont condone it i can understand it. If you upset someone enough you "will" get this sort of response. Im a CB'er by the way.

Do you know, in all my years of CB radio use ive never actually heard anyone talk like that on the CB. Ive been on since 1979 (not continuously, i do let go the mic occasionally ;o) The only people who talk like that are people who have no real idea of CB and are just taking the Mick. Am i wrong?? do people talk like that on the CB where you live?? Let us know where these people are so we can avoid them ....

Hi Hully,
Unfortunately there are a few like him on the Amateur band. Its a shame really. Its meant to be a hobby after all and his attitude will put many prospective new Amateurs off as they will see it as an unfriendly place. Not good for the cause..

I used to live in Swansea many moons ago, Ammanford to be exact, a few miles west of Cardiff i know but still in the general area. Theres some CB type talk obviously like whats yer 20 is it.... or give me a roger boyo but the way some people come out on here with their parrot CB lingo its obvious they are just taking the mick. As far as angle goes maybe they want a 90 degree'ing :o)

Indeed. He claims to have both a now obsolete advanced ham ticket, (unlikely) and a pilot's license (highly unlikely.)! But he hides behind a cheezy handle swiped from a cheezy 50's sci-fi show.

Nope. You throw as much fuel on the fire as anyone in rrcb. Jim has a good point, if you don't want CB involved in your ham arguments, don't cross post to rrcb. simple enuff.

I have nothing against CB or CBers use one myself

indeed I would love to see more CBer hang out in RRAP and other place

if it is true that I am puting out than one other time in RRCB well it is a fraction of RRAP

Well, after hearing the many problems of the people in NO i just thought id let you know your not alone with the animal instinct instilled in many black communitys and their insistance to riot and kill.
Last night in the UK's second largest City some residents of Lozells in Birmingham took it upon themselves to riot, smash things up and set cars/buildings alight. Not content with that certain people in the group decided it was a good idea to stab people and at least one person was killed with dozens injured.
http://uk.news.yahoo.com/23102005/325/appeal-calm-deadly-birmingham-unrest.html
Why is it so many black and asian people cant control themselves and live decently in a democratic society. Why do they think its their right to do the things they do above. In the Birmingham area and as with most large councils and people go out of their way to support and nuture black and asian communitys and even let them build their mosques and pander to their religious beliefs and write legal council documentation in multi lingual tounge, but still they segrigate themselves, and riot, loot and steal/murder for any reason.
Enoch Powell warned the politicians decades ago about the rivers of blood which will flow in our streets due to immigration but he was scoffed at and branded a screaming racist..... seems he wasnt actually far off the truth.....

Yes while this is true, in reality, how many 6 year olds have you actually heard transmitting on amateur bands. While its possible its highly unlikely unless he was being driven and supervised by an "old ham" parent. It is a stepping stone towards an intermediate licence and so on. They cant use all the frequencies and power that the fully fledged "amateur" can but then again you would know this already. I do agree though that its a degeneration of an up until now elite technical pursuit but unfortunately times are changing.
I would be amazed if anyone who gets their M3 wouldnt go on to the next level or even go all the way. I feel though your attempt to steer any radio ham away from this scheme is not a good idea. Surely taking these M3s under your wing and encouraging them is the way forward not belittling them and ignoring them. Doing this will only cause unrest and bad feelings/abuse on the airwaves and drive many new Amateurs away from a fascinating but dwindling hobby.
You may disagree with me, which is your choice but i believe your attitude is completely wrong.
Regards,
Graham

You obviously live with your head up your backside and dont see whats going on around you and in the world you live in. BTW ive seen your other postings on here and believe me, your opinions count for nothing so go play on your other threads.

For anyone actually interested and not wanting to w--k in public like kb, the riot started over an alleged gang rape of a 14 year old immigrant. This is the level you are dealing with with these scumbags. Defend them if you want but id like to see hanging brought back in.

sure is great that new orleans will be a great city again! i do feel sorry for the areas that will have to support our niggers.

they're not going to work and they will do their crimes. niggers are animals so what can one expect. at least new orleans is cleansed!

Oh my! And how many will use such a hated posting to justify further vilonece or crime? I don't know a lot about New Orleans, except that there's not really a preference in race when it comes to getting drunk or stoned. It's the boasted way of life there....party on, a regular Sodom and Gamorrah.......That's the sad part, not race.

You can voice your own hatred, but it won't solve any problem....only cause more problems. Sad!

I think it's a joke when they were told to evacuate and after they ignored that request, now they are cursing the government. And why....are we supposed to support them for everything?

Check out my site http://www.ve5jl.com

I'm starting to use MySql to load the scanner database onto the site. You can see the latest listings for Northern Saskatchewan.

I you know of a good search script in .php let me know so I can use that too.

Also I have a Message board if you want to use it, it is generally for Scanning Shortwave Ham Radio and CB radio.

Thx

so ? your point?

you think a gang rape esp of a 14 yo is not something to get upset about.

sick man realy sick

the methods were of course counter productive indeed the worst case of doing something undersatndable but stupid was in Toledo where NAZI's were going to protest attacks by Blacks street gangs on white. Yes that should piss folks and make em mad, but the reaction of the Black street gangs atackk the (white) NAZI's while understandable on some level was stupid

Now this is serious. What you will have is some mosques running 10KW. This is a back door way of getting rid of freebanders on 11m. It could make freebanders migrate to 6MHz. I hope the scheme fails.

No,its about allowing mosques to broadcast calls to prayer, which is why its been extended to those towns.

Why do they need to dress it up as "religious groups" ?

Be kind to Robeson. His behavior is his way of dealing with his own problems. He believes in projecting his troubles upon strangers, quite the quirky way of dealing and providing himself with some sort of mental therapy. He's a control freak and member of the Civil Air Patrol who acts like he does for reasons known only to himself. He is a man who dislikes compromise, his ego is easily bruised, and one only needs browse his warblings over the years for such an illustration of how this blemish of a Radio Amateur. Robeson is never wrong, don't you know that by now?

Jerry Oxendine told me Robeson was an officer in the CAP and Robeson has confirmed this himself. This by itself wouldn't be an issue, but the fact he feels it important enough to put it out there in public and couple it with such behavior unbecoming of one who holds such a position makes his hypocrisy fair game.

It's plain to see why this country is hated more each day around the world. With leaders like we have and officers like Oxendine and Robeson in charge of anyone or anything, who are out there setting examples like they do and spoiling the good image of such civil/military endeavors and entities, it's no wonder this great country is having its image tarnished. Robeson is the worst type of American. He wraps himself in the flag and attacks those with whom he disagrees as opposed to attacking the actual subject matter/topic. Another "semi-qualified licensed" hammie who has much to learn regarding communications. He was taught Fields Communications and basic introductories regarding such, but as exampled, is illiterate when it comes to Discipline in Communications, knows nothing of Approaches of Communications, Relations, Negotiations and a host of other academia related to his chosen radio hobby that he never bothered to learn.
He and Oxendine are much alike. Zero tolerance for any views but their own myopic concerns.

What type are you looking to install? Doesn't take much to install a fiberglass antenna such as an antron or other fiberglass set of ears and there are numerous ways to achieve this. It would be cheaper to have a local cb'er/ham do it for you.

They arent allowed to run any extra power legally than the rest of us but if they did i doubt whether they would get away with kicking power like that.
It would cause horrendous interference especially if the rig had been fiddled with by one of the tweek and hope merchants...

Its not the mosques that are at issue, its the Asian intolerance to anything outside their culture. Many asians have absolutely no interest in western ways and will not bend on ANY issue. Black people actually made the effort and learned the language and tried to fit in... at least the older ones did. Most of the younger ones have now got huge chips on their shoulders and think they have the right to everything and if they dont get it they scream the race card.. The asian groups and the black are now at loggerheads because of culture clashes and lack of respect towards others and their way of life. Its not a black/white issue in Lozells, its a black brown/issue. Many Blacks see the asians "seemingly" getting a better deal than they did and they dont like it.

What has a gang rape of a 14 yr old girl and rioting for no other reason than they want to riot and cause as much shit as possible... why did they steal the chip shop owners till who had nothing to do with any of this? Why did they kill innocent people and smash and burn innocent peoples cars and steal their possesions??? It turns out the rape story was a wind up which got chinese whispered to the local illegal pirate radio station... blick FM. There wasnt even any truth in the story...there was no girl and there was no rape..... the rioters used the story as an excuse.... scumbags full stop.

537. Re: Grounding or Counterpoise Imax 2000

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb
Date: 2005-10-24 20:22:24 UTC
From: Gerry <Gerry.1xfdfs@news.radiobanter.com> Message-ID: <Gerry.1xfdfs@news.radiobanter.com>
Source record: 205350

Hi all, based on its length the I-Max is close enough to be regarded as a .64wl NOT a 6/8wl as I previously stated, the I-Max 2000 will have a small dbd gain advantage over a true 5/8wl antenna, but not so much that the human eye or ear could discern the difference.
Grounding ANY vertical is desireable, mainly to reduce static which can be a real pain at times. It is good practise to use large diameter ground wire, and keep it as short as possible, running it to a COMMON connection in the shack, to which all RF equipment should be connected. You should be careful that the length of ground wire is NOT RESONANT at the frequency of operation, otherwise it will be ineffective, and may contribute to RF entering the shack. Also, keeping the antenna as far away from the shack as possible is a good idea, otherwise RF may enter in even with good grounding. Sometimes it may prove necessary to use ferrite rings or clip-ons to cool a hot mic. It's wise to use a LOW PASS FILTER such as the Kenwood LF-30A, and in addition, the use of a LINE ISOLATER (or two) such as Radio Works model T4 Plus, both exiting the rig and at the base of the antenna. This helps eliminate RF returning into the shack via the coax shield. It is wise to watch the VSWR when using Line Isolators as high levels can cause them to run kinda hot, but, at CB output levels it might not be a problem!
OK all, I hope all this is of some help to you, I'll be offline for some time, so don't expect a come back to respond to any aspect of this anyway soon.
Good luck and 73.

Hi.

Go on the radio shack website. You might be able to download the manual with the schematic. If not, give them a call and ask them. NOT the stores, you will get blank looks.
Call the main place (tech support) , I think it's in Texas. Not sure though.

Hi again, just a quick comment on ground rods.
I use six eight foot copper ground rods, spaced about one metre apart, and what I neglected to say previously, linked together with earth wire. In formation they describe a square. A simple test to establish if you have a good earth - get a PP3 9 volt battery and a suitable bulb, check it's working first, then connect the +v wire to the positive battery terminal the touch the negative lead to your earth rod(s), if the bulb glows brightly, the earth is good, if not, seek experienced assistance.
Too old to DX BB? Heck I was talking to a gentleman recently aged ninenty nine, still hale and hearty! Build yourself a three element circular polarised beam antenna, you can purchase plans for that as CB City International, I think it's still owned by a guy called Lou Franklin in Phoenix Arizona. Great little beam, I built one way back about 1981, it holds the skip like nothing you've ever used before.
Build the beam and cut the phasing harness, this makes one polarisation operate ninenty degrees out of phase and generates the circular transmission. It virtually eliminates multi-path fading as DX polarisation being random shifts between vertical and horizontal to something in between, this beam catches it all. Highly recommended for DX!

Good DX es 73.

546. okay, here's the scoop... I guess I may need that dipole after all :-D

(In short, I need a dipole.....)

I tend to run before I walk, or put rather simply, tend to make bad purchases sometimes. Anyway, it looks highly probable that I won't even get to erect my Imax 2000 due to bylaws that I failed to look up regarding antennas at my town home. In a nutshell, I'm asking for permission, but expect a big fat, "NO!"

So, I need a dipole...and just realized that I could put one in my garage. It should all work out very nicely in there. As a matter of fact, I will be running the coax from the garage to my living room shack, but only while the wife is away.

Can you lead me to the best dipole money can buy? Due to the morse code going away, I think it best to get an antenna tuner for 10 meter when I get the privileges (and only then), but will focus right now on a CB dipole, for skip.

I see that Workman makes one.

And this guy makes one:
http://cgi.ebay.com/ws/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewItem&item=5821933353&fromMakeTrack=true

In addition, there is the double bazooka, which I've heard some negative things about.

Is there anything else? I just want to buy a well-constructed one and get it over with.

Thanks once again for your infinite wisdom, usenet!

Any dipole is the best one money can buy. Any will work whether it's a homemade or store bought. You will still have to erect it and trim it, regardless.

Get someone to help you, and put one in your 12 foot attic. You will do fine.

Yes, they do. They aren't punks, but neither are the 'Stros. Although, it all comes down to execution, and we executed poorly last night. Had we not had the 2 errors, the outcome would likely have been different.

NOW THEN, we are at home, and it's time to execute! :-)

Needless to say that we're all a bit goofy. Oxendine is no exception, and that's no big deal. He does make some excellent points from time to time. But Gunny Dudly is living in La-La-Land!!!

Slightly OT, did you see in the news that the Shrub picked his chief

He also knows nothing of his claimed MOS in the Corps. The only thing he seems to remember is standing on the yellow footsteps. Perhaps that was the culmination of his military career; i.e, he got kicked out of boot camp!

The difference is that Oxendine will sincerely consider an opposing POV. He may disagree, but he does listen. Dudly, OTOH, developed his communication skills by watching Pee-Wee Herman videos.

You can put a whole array in your garage and it probably won't work as well as a 1/4-wave vertical 30 feet in the air. You need height, not complexity. If you can't challenge the fascist laws of your community against antennas then think 'covert'. If nothing else works, put up a nice tall antenna and hang an American Flag on it. Call it a "Rovian" antenna (a name fresh in my mind from another thread and describes the intent perfectly).

Regardless, the best advice is to hit the public library and find a book on antennas. Start with the basics -- you have to crawl before you can run.

I've been reading about force 12 antennas...nothing there seems to work for my application. What I need is a good dipole, which I think I found. Also, I need to know more about cophasing dipoles. I am willing to spend the money on up to 4 of them, and I wonder if someone here can tell me how that process works. I have someone to help me with the installation.

Sure you can co-phase 4 or more dipoles. A Super Scanner has 3 co-phased. You just need the proper mathing network and the proper spacing between them. You won't gain much from this, but it can be done.

No antennas or no towers? Can you bolt the Imax to the peak of your house and be OK? Can you tell them it's a TV antenna? Do they provide you with free cable television? If you are a ham can you erect an antenna? Can you tell them it's a homeland security thing and you are doing your part :)

If you have trees a homebrew dipole works wonders, the higher the better. You stated before it could be difficult for you due to injuries? You will need to pick the feedling out from the dipole so enlisting the help of a friend may be a good thing.

The Imax is not ugly, it would not look bad on the side of the house, it's white and pretty thin, If done tastefully no one should complain. I have mine on a push up behind and away from the house secured to an outbuilding, it is not readily noticeable, although, my property does have mature trees. Some even put imaxes IN trees.

It's pretty shitty that you can't put up a simple antenna, I wonder if they knew that it was not a big honkin beam if it would make a difference. A beam would not fly with my wife, she has no problem with the Imax!

I don't know about anything about co-phasing, with the exception of there is space needed between them. Someone here (maybe Landshark), mentioned they had co-phased base antennas. But he is in a townhome, which would probably not have the space for such a plan. Not only that, he tore me up about how he was disabled, and hanging 1 dipole would be a problem. Now he wants to hang 4. For what he want to use it for, 1 dipole whould be plenty enough, and could have easily been done 1 month ago. Regardless of whether he builds one or buys one, he will need some help to hang it, and that scenerio would be the least problematic for him and his help.

I messed up. I should have been more specific. Look at a satellite dish company, and see if you can get one of their guys to either do it on the side, or such. If you put it in a tree, look for a tree surgeon that is a tree climber. If you can mount it on the top of one of the gable ends, you might be able to do it yourself with some help.

I'm learning now that it is pretty common practice for people living in association areas (town homes and condos), that installing anything other than a small dish, is usually unacceptable.

I lived in an association for 5 years, and you are right. It would not go with the area, and people would not allow it. The dipole in the peak of the attic would work well. Or, it you have a mature tree, you can hang a dipole vertcally and almost go unoticed, with the exception of the feedline being present. That would require some trenching or digging.

Try taking an IQ test and i bet theres hardly any difference between you and most people on CB. The only test you would outshine most CBers would be radio related...

True.... but you didnt have to read it. My original post was just to let the readers in here who posted on the problems in NO that they arent alone. I didnt intend it to grow into a tit for tat discussion but, with most posts in here... it tends to go that way.
80 per cent of stuff posted in here has nothing to do with CB, but when your on the CB im sure 80 per cent of what you talk about isnt about CB.

It seems unfair i agree but it is down in the rules of lease that you signed when you took over the building (not you personally, any housing association member) We have one in Bournville, Birmingham and the rules are so strict its crazy. You cant even have a small dish unless its in the kitchen. But they signed the paperwork so they should have known what they were entitled to do before moving in. No good complaining afterwards. Move to a house in the country, get a stonking huge tower and massive element beam and push that kilowatt.... :o)

My radios will transmit within 25 yards but not beyond 25 yards. What may be the problem? I have ruled out operator error (lol).

Be kind to Robeson.

>I don't think so

His behavior is his way of dealing with his own problems. He believes in projecting his troubles upon strangers, quite the quirky way of dealing and providing himself with some sort of mental therapy. He's a control freak and member of the Civil Air Patrol who acts like he does for reasons known only to himself. He is a man who dislikes compromise, his ego is easily bruised, and one only needs browse his warblings over the years for such an illustration of how this blemish of a Radio Amateur. Robeson is never wrong, don't you know that by now?

Jerry Oxendine told me Robeson was an officer in the CAP and Robeson has confirmed this himself. This by itself wouldn't be an issue, but the fact he feels it important enough to put it out there in public and couple it with such behavior unbecoming of one who holds such a position makes his hypocrisy fair game.

>Needless to say that we're all a bit goofy.

Guilty. I mean, some of us find pleasure in dx, others in building and fine tuning, swapping diodes, others in ragchewing and still others with cw, and then we have the antennas gurus and rats. Outside the hobby, the whole damn world thinks we're goofy.

Absolutely. Jerry has plenty of knowledge that, at the right time, can be mined for gems. I'd enjoy a cup of coffee with the man if we kept politics and license status out of the conversational equation.

Heheh! You know when I thought the proverbial sign was given for marking the beginning of the end of the GW Bush version of conservatism? Ann Coulter slamming him. When Ann Coulter slams GW Bush, you know it's bad. I actually cracked a smile listening to her,,,she -does- have a sense of humor. I've twice heard her say regrading Miers "We (GOP conservatives...NOT necessarily Bush conservatives) didn't know he was going to hire his cleaning lady"

With leaders like we have and officers like Oxendine and Robeson in charge of anyone or anything, who are out there setting examples like they do and spoiling the good image of such civil/military endeavors and entities, it's no wonder this great country is having its image tarnished. Robeson is the worst type of American. He wraps himself in the flag and attacks those with whom he disagrees as opposed to attacking the actual subject matter/topic.

>That's a basic Rovian debate tactic.

Sucks! Some people have been driven to believe that dissent equals dishonor because of this admin!

Another "semi-qualified

I know the Army had a fast-lane to the LPN program after one was a medic. Crazy. Military medics can suture and all kinds of shit in the field, but when they get back to civilian life, they aren't allowed or recognized to do any of it.

He and Oxendine are much alike. Zero tolerance for any views but their own myopic concerns.

Perhaps I should do some reading in the amateur groups, then. Guess I'm only getting bits and pieces of all the love going around in the groups.

How the hell do you watch TV if you don't want to pay for cable or have some sort of problem with the cable provider?

That's bullshit! I'm not on anyone's case here, just a rant. But for christ's sake, a 20 some-odd foot chunk of white fiberglass, less than an inch thick ain't going to ruin the resale value of the neighbor's home.

I will never, I repeat NEVER move into an area where my house has to look so much like the neighbors house that I can't even add a damn Imax without a pole. I see safety issues with unsupported towers, but an antenna bolted to wood, a satellite dish? Come on, where the hell is this, stepford?

Un-F-ing real, America my ass, can't even put an antenna on something you OWN, that's.... bullshit. Where is this country going?

I have these same radios and get similar results though I can get out a bit further than 25yds, perhaps a couple hundred yards.

Then i wish you luck with your dreams :o)
Just to make you chuckle i used to know a woman whos handle escapes me for the moment but she had an open fireplace in her council house and she was scared of putting up an outside aerial so what she did was assemble a 5/8 wave blue lazer 21 ft aerial up the chimney so there was about 2ft sticking out the top. Not really noticeable unless you were looking at the chimney but boy did she get out.... 50w linear was all she used and we could hear her from 20 miles away pretty clear.. and yes... for those about to ask... she picked up pretty good too...

That is not entirely true. I lived in a condo that I owned from 1993-1999. While you own it, you own the building that you live in. The land is owned by everyone in the community. If you have a townhouse, then you migh have a small back yard you own, but there are rules there too.

But you are making more of it that it really needs to be. And no, they are not "fascist" as clueless Frank leads you to believe. The fact of the matter is, you buy into a community, with a set of rules. There are there prior to any purchase. And new rules added or modified after purchase must be approved by a community vote. Everyone that goes into buying one of these know damn well what is required. In fact, it is a law that the by-laws of the community be given to you at closing. If you didn't know about this before hand, than you didn't do your homework, or you had a shitty lawyer.

It's really simple. If you want to go hang an antenna, or put up a tower, then simply go buy a house. And watch what you buy there, too. Some newer development also have rules for houses. The bottom line is, you are in control prior to your purchase. If you don't like the rules, don't buy one.

FYI, I was on the condo board for about 2 years while I was there. DirectTV and DISH were starting to come out. As a board, the state law required that we must allow satellite dishes, however we could limit their placement. So what we did was approve a rule that allowed dishes to be hung on posts in the ground. They could not be attached to the structure or roof. If you were on the wrong side of the view, you were shit out of luck. We did this because the hack installers would put them on any roof and side of the building. This would maintian the quality of the looks of the complex, and hold up the property values, which was key. By the time I sold the condo, several dishes were being put up on wooden posts, with no complaints.

Had I had a CB I wanted to install, I would have gone the "dipole in the attic" route. That would be perfectly legal and within the rules, and there isn't a damn thing anyone in the community could do about it. If he did that 1 month ago when he first asked, he would have been on the air already. Instead, he had gone round and round about numerous antennas, and now he wants to co-phase 4 dipoles.

Unfortunately Chad its in UK and US as well as quite a few other countries, some big landlords are so ignorant and all powerful they dont even want you to decorate the houses without clearing it with them first. Personally i wouldnt want to move into an area like that either.... but people do and they sign too quickly without taking into account the restrictions, or like many, they just think "no one will bother if i stick up a small outside aerial" but they do... boy do they...

This is the response of most folks when you disagree with them. They get mad that you dont agree. They simply cant leave it alone and say hey maybe what I think is just not that important to the rest of the living world. Instead they get mad and call you names and say you are wrong simply for disagreeing with their simple point of view.

That's a pretty cool story :-)... I love hearing those good stories about Cbing, which reminds me of my first shack. I ran a Cobra 19 plus and a very small power supply I bought off a guy for $15 or $20...the kicker was the antenna! I ran a 102" fiberglass whip and that Cobra 19 plus. Boy, was I having the time of my life, back in the mid-late 80's. This 102" whip was hung on my chimney with a chimney mounting bracket. Not exactly a base antenna like your friend's, but an antenna that I could talk/receive 10 or 12 miles with nonetheless!

I, as I've said, was so happy to be a new home owner and to have it be new construction, that I failed to think about my past hobbies and how they would come back to me when I got settled in a bit. At first, I sold all my old equipment, which was very good stuff, at very low prices. I sort of regret that move now. Any way, that's been the story of my radio life... Buy sell, buy again...

Since english isn't my native language there are a few gaps here and there:

what does TALK SKIP mean?

Would anybody care to explain?

thanks, Roland.

White persons get violent, too!
They always say to their opponent, "I'll put a smackdown on yo ass!" How immature!
Recreating Wrestling episodes on other persons!

Some of them despise the police and they keep that mentality throughout their entire life -- because they either get it from their family members or they get it from watching "COPS".

I don't like getting speeding tickets, nevertheless, that don't mean I hate the police.
I don't like it when these individuals call me up wanting donations to the F.O.P. (Fraternal Order of Police)

The actual PD as issued awareness about these imposters and that the real PD does not call people up on the phones! I even asked for their phone number when one of them called me. He got scared and hung up. He told me that they don't give out their phone number. I told him that I only donate to the actual PD in person.

Anyhow, the point is ... I've been around individuals who have no respect for others and it is NOT just African Americans and Asians and whoever --- White folk are just as bad when they get a hold of some bad info and use it to fuel their disgruntledness towards other members of the American society.
When I was young, long before I could drive a car my mom and I witnessed a fight in my hometown near a grocery store in which two WHITE men were fighting.
It ended out in the street where one took a rock and threw it down near the guy! I rolled down the window to yell and both of them but my mom got after me with "that look" that mothers give when you done messed up.

I sat my white ass back down and remained a pacifist all my life. I have been told that mommy and daddy can't be there to fight my battles for me when I get older.

That's true with me trying to holla out tha window at them dudes to stop fighting, but in self defense I am not allowed to show resistance -- I have to let the opponent beat me down at all times because If I strike back then I will end up in Jail with a criminal record --- for "defending myself."
That's how bad our judicial system is --protecting the bully and punishing the victims!

well, here I am and still a pacifist remaining silent all these years not being able to stand up for myself whatsoever.

I rarely speak to others because I am being monitored for suspicious behavior --- I've never ever committed any crimes, never smoked or been drunk or dropped out of school or ended up in the "nut-house".

I am a nobody, yet I live in America so that's why I ID myself as an American Citizen.

No, unfortunately not. The Icom 703 does, which is also a QRP rig (low power). I chose the FT-817 due to it being easy to modify - it's just a software mod, and the software is FREE.

Ship is when the upper atmosphere becomes ionized and radio waves bounce back down to earth as opposed to propagating out into space. When "skip" is active one can talk around the world with a stock rig due to the ping pong effect. Someone 20 miles away can't hear you at all but someone 1000's of miles away can get you at an S9!

That being said, the sad thing is that the superbowl skip quote is WRONG. They are using soooo much power that what you hear is groundwave propagation, like an AM broadcast station. When the there is no ionization there is none, zero, no skip. So they aren't talking skip, they are just pushing thru with tons of power. Unless they are skipping off the moon, which... would not surprise me :)

I'm pointing out your typos to further demonstrate the fact that you are a hypocrite. Feel free to point out -my- typos to your heart's content -- it doesn't bother me at all because, unlike you, I don't

I'd rather be a punk under a rock than a fantasy-prone hypocrite.
Maybe someday you will set aside your delusions long enough to understand what 'integrity' means..... but I doubt it.

Nope.

YOUR words have cemented THIS into the archives, Frankie!

You lied. You stole from the government which is to say you stole from me. You swore an oath that you had no intention of keeping.

No one, save for you, is projecting anything.

If it's not, why are the only targets used to train Marine riflemen (and all recruits) head shots and "center mast", or chest shots?

PLEASE, Frankie...Show me SOME reference to targets and USMC training resources that say "...just shoot for the arms or legs".

Just one...?!?!

Frank, you're a documented liar already.

Why continue the charade?

YOU have NO BUSINESS critiquing ANYone's military service, let alone mine.

Hey! We have ONE thing in common! I don't "profess" to be the newsgroup spelling cop either!

The fact is that I DID "graduate beyond the yellow footsteps".

I've provided more than a few references that any reasonably "connected" Marine, ex-Marine, retired Marine or just plain old Joe or JoAnn Citizen could corroborate as true.

You? You "profess" to have been a Marine, but even by your own admission were a ####bird of one, unable to keep your act together for just ONE enlistment...let alone four.

And yet another example of The Coward of Silliland trying to blow off facts.

The base library at MCRD keeps a copy of every platoon's
"yearbook". Theya re available in other forums.

Look it up or acknowledge that you're the punk I claim you to be.

You freely drop names like LtCol Oliver North as if you were old drinking buddies, yet can't seem to find simple information from archives you also claim to have access to...

What's up with that?

What feelings?

Feelings are characteristic of human beings.

Frankie, you're a liar, a coward, a cheat, and in my NOT so humble opinion, a thief. Being lectured by a punk like you about "integrity" is obscene.

Steve, K4YZ

he isn't sure there is anything to critique off hand I think he is mistaken on that count I think you had one. one of keeping your head down covering your ass (big job there I guess)

and avoiding anything that might lead a big decision

you are right

you are just not honest enough to fess up to what you do

after all nothing is your fault

indeed here you explain a lot about yourself accusastion is the same as guilt which has become your SOP here in RRAP and likely in real life

ah yes noone you dislike is even human borong Stevie and showing you off in the bad light we RRAP'ers have come to expect for you

I wasnt disagreeing with anyones point i was replying to it. Also prehaps you can point to the part where i got mad and started calling names or are you on about some other postings now?
As far as disagreeing with someones point of view i was replying to kps pigeon holing me into a group of people when he knows nothing about me. Now you are implying that im a bit simple... well, anyone who stands up to what they believe in is simple are they? someone who points out something that makes others feel uncomfortable whether it be truthful or not makes me a rascist does it.... anyway.. perhaps you could explain to me whats wrong with being a rascist in the first place?? If i dont want to live in a Muslim or Black community arent i allowed the choice?? or am i having multi cultural diversity forced down my throat whether i want it or not.... as long as i am tolerant whats the problem?? am i not allowed an opinion??

Anyhow, dont steal things... its illegal....

Yes they do... but it rarely breaks out into a full scale riot with murder and looting and the rest of it... unless your in Ireland of course but thats a bit different. As far as the street talk goes thats rarely anything other than black or asian talk in the UK, white people, unless joking about, dont speak like that.

> Some of them despise the police and they keep that mentality throughout

The Cops are the bad guys whatever they do... they cant win in situatuions like that. Parental teaching can happen without them even realising it. The same goes with everyone though but its always blacks or asians who have the bad attitude toward the police which seems to be inbred.. in the UK that is anyhow.

They call you up and ask for donations??? cheeky people.. As for the police, i personally have the utmost respect for them but then again im a 60's child so when i was younger you would be in serious trouble for cheeking a cop and when your parents found out about it you would be for the high jump again... these days the parents have a go at the police.... letting their little darlings think its ok and giving them the wrong message. This is where the do good "limp wristed liberals" have made the cops life exceedingly difficult and the courts hear how the persons from a poor home and no ones given them a break and they are virtually let off.... walking away from court laughing about how easy it was...

I dont donate anything to the Police... i pay them enough with my council tax payments... a chunk of that goes directly to them.

Unless it personally involves you its best not to get involved for numerous reasons... 1/ the guy getting beaten up may have deserved it. 2/ You might be confronting a person with mental issues and might end up getting stabbed for no reason.3/ They might be a bit drunk and might actually be mates having a disagreement. After a few more beers they might be best of mates again whereas their frustration at whatever had upset them might get directly pointed at you for interfering...

Bit unfair dont you think. Asians and Blacks seem to have no problem attacking the white population be it verbally or physically. They never seem to get branded rascist even though a lot of them are the most rascist people about. Whereas if i imply anything which might deem to be derogitory i get it full barrels.... most unfair..

MARKIE'S ABORTION OF SUBJECT LINE CHANGE:

"Stevie claims to personal the govt, again"

WTF was that, Markie?

Nope.

Sure I do.

That lying SOB swore an oath to support and defend the Constitution, wherein he ALSO swore to obey those appointed senior to him.

He freely brags about having disobeyed orders and subsequently was court martialed...Not once, but TWICE, for his conduct.

Nope.

Frank suggests that it's NOT a Marine's job to kill his enemy.

Follw the thread back and read for yourself, Markie.

Where he swore to uphold his oath, and his frequent assertions that I did not serve in the United States Marine Corps, among others.

Nope...You asked, I told you.

And Frankie's only reason to be in this forum were to try and "undermine" my USMC service claims on your behalf.

He's an idiot. You two have a lot in common.

I do my best to make sure I have my bets covered, Markie. That's just a prudent thing to do.

Frankie claimed I "profess" to be the "newsgroup spelling cop".
That was a lie. I've never done it.

That I correct YOUR spelling does not make me the "newsgroup spelling cop"...It just means I am prodding you to bring your writing skills up to at least late grade school or junior high school.

a multiple issue of the same award)

No...Only you, Brian, and Lennie. Frankie's not even a regular

Why would you disbelieve him? In the 70's, 130 and up was considered genius. The bar has been raised, today I think it's like 140 or so, so why is it so difficult for you to understand he can be at 147? Besides, many of us who were subjected as children to a littany of IQ tests and the like don't put much stock in them. The worldwide MENSA and the National GATE groups are full of those who are full of themselves, not that much unlike the ego one often finds in radio.

K1MAN BULLETIN - B051026A -

LEGAL UPDATE FROM THE AMERICAN AMATEUR RADIO ASSOCIATION (AARA) AND INTERNATIONAL AMATEUR RADIO NETWORK (IARN) LEGAL DEPARTMENT:

AARA is literally flooded these days with E-Mails and calls regarding K1MAN's on going battle with the FCC. A trip to a local law library has been recommended to hundreds of people. Look at 47 CFR Part 1, Subparts A and B. Of particular interest has been 47 CFR Pt. 1.62:

"(a)(1) Where there is pending before the Commission at the time of expiration of license any proper and timely application for renewal of license with respect to any activity of a continuing nature (such as amateur radio), in accordance with the provisions of section 9(b) of the Administrative Procedures Act, such license shall remain in effect until such time as the Commission shall make a final determination with respect to the renewal application."

The FCC has acknowledged K1MAN's timely filed renewal application on their web site. Look up K1MAN on www.QRZ.com and click on FCC INFO.

If Hollingsworth and Company try and argue in court that Granting K1MAN's recent timely filed renewal application and then "setting it aside" the very next day constitutes "final determination with respect to the renewal application," thus satisfying 47 CFR Pt. 1.62 and the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution which guarantees due process of law, they will lose in the D.C. Court of Appeals if not lose in front of a Commission Administrative Law Judge. Just doing nothing more than "setting the license aside," as they have so pathetically tried so far, is not going to "cut it" at IARN and AARA, and K1MAN has no other choices other than to "give up on America" (not in this lifetime!) or to continue operating under 47 CFR Pt. 1.62 (2):

"A licensee operating by virtue of this paragraph shall, after the date of expiration in the license, post, in addition to the original license, any acknowledgment received from the Commission that the renewal application has been accepted for filing.

Note that the FCC web site lists K1MAN's renewal application as "PENDING." A printout of this has been posted next to K1MAN's original (now expired) license per 47 CFR 1.62 (2), and K1MAN on air operations continue under this entitled authority.

Secondly, federal law does not allow anything alleged in an unpaid NAL to be brought up in any other proceeding such as a renewal hearing or revocation hearing. The April 2005 $21,000 NAL against K1MAN has not been affirmed by the Commission and is illegal anyway since the substantive issues therein are the same as the ones in the unpaid 1990 NALs illegally "deep sixed" by the Commission years ago.

America is a land of laws and not of cheap and corrupt men like Hollingsworth and Company. He must have been sick on the day they taught law at law school, wherever that might have been. He should have gotten a note from his mother and made up that ENTIRE day! How much of YOUR tax money has poorly educated Hollingsworth and Company wasted already on old K1MAN? If there are valid issues with K1MAN (or W1AW and ARRL), let's go to court and be done with it. I will even buy Hollingsworth's lunch! Until that day comes, K1MAN continues to operate on the air under entitled authority CFR 47 Pt. 1.62. 73 and GL de K1MAN

No doubt! Of course I fully expect the Texans to screw this one off also, so it might not be that much of a battle. The only bright spot in the Texans season has been that the Astros are in post season. :-)

K1MAN BULLETIN - B051026A -

LEGAL UPDATE FROM THE AMERICAN AMATEUR RADIO ASSOCIATION (AARA) AND INTERNATIONAL AMATEUR RADIO NETWORK (IARN) LEGAL DEPARTMENT:

AARA is literally flooded these days with E-Mails and calls regarding K1MAN's on going battle with the FCC. A trip to a local law library has been recommended to hundreds of people. Look at 47 CFR Part 1, Subparts A and B. Of particular interest has been 47 CFR Pt. 1.62:

"(a)(1) Where there is pending before the Commission at the time of expiration of license any proper and timely application for renewal of license with respect to any activity of a continuing nature (such as amateur radio), in accordance with the provisions of section 9(b)
of the Administrative Procedures Act, such license shall remain in effect until such time as the Commission shall make a final determination with respect to the renewal application."

The FCC has acknowledged K1MAN's timely filed renewal application on their web site. Look up K1MAN on www.QRZ.com and click on FCC INFO.

If Hollingsworth and Company try and argue in court that Granting K1MAN's recent timely filed renewal application and then "setting it aside" the very next day constitutes "final determination with respect to the renewal application," thus satisfying 47 CFR Pt. 1.62 and the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution which guarantees due process of law, they will lose in the D.C. Court of Appeals if not lose in front of a Commission Administrative Law Judge. Just doing nothing more than "setting the license aside," as they have so pathetically tried so far, is not going to "cut it" at IARN and AARA, and K1MAN has no other choices other than to "give up on America" (not in this lifetime!) or to continue operating under 47 CFR Pt. 1.62 (2):

"A licensee operating by virtue of this paragraph shall, after the date of expiration in the license, post, in addition to the original license, any acknowledgment received from the Commission that the renewal application has been accepted for filing.

Note that the FCC web site lists K1MAN's renewal application as "PENDING." A printout of this has been posted next to K1MAN's original (now expired) license per 47 CFR 1.62 (2), and K1MAN on air operations continue under this entitled authority.

Secondly, federal law does not allow anything alleged in an unpaid NAL to be brought up in any other proceeding such as a renewal hearing or revocation hearing. The April 2005 $21,000 NAL against K1MAN has not been affirmed by the Commission and is illegal anyway since the substantive issues therein are the same as the ones in the unpaid 1990 NALs illegally "deep sixed" by the Commission years ago.

America is a land of laws and not of cheap and corrupt men like Hollingsworth and Company. He must have been sick on the day they taught law at law school, wherever that might have been. He should have gotten a note from his mother and made up that ENTIRE day! How much of YOUR tax money has poorly educated Hollingsworth and Company wasted already on old K1MAN? If there are valid issues with K1MAN (or W1AW and ARRL), let's go to court and be done with it. I will even buy Hollingsworth's lunch! Until that day comes, K1MAN continues to operate on the air under entitled authority CFR 47 Pt. 1.62. 73 and GL de K1MAN

One no reason but your word to say is lying SoB but his first duty is the constitution entitirely possible to feel a conflict in which case he is bound to disobey (rather like some solders at Abu Graib should have done but that is another topic) even were he tried and found guilty (it being found that the orders were not illegal) thais does not prove he was lying or in any way violated his oath or stole his rightfull pay

you have presented nothing that allows you to state

so what?

BTW your facts don't seem to be true

he has admited to making a mistake (haven't seen him says it was violating orders) and taking a lumps and once to being tried and found not guilty

Can't speak for the USMC but the Army teaches it people that it is better to wound the enemy in most cases ties at least 4 people that way

I suspect the USMC theaching much the same thing

Most of us ARE galled to hear about Baxter, Markie....He's a skidmark in the shorts of life as far as Amateur Radio goes.

This fight WILL get "carr(ied) through", Markie...Baxter's collected so many black eyes in his record that I bet the deal is about done for him.

Steve is "A" NCOIC of the Department of Redundancy Department. Except when it comes to his service record and his "seven hostile actions."
Then he turns into a stone.

Yes, I am...FCC license signed and dated in my pocket.

However that's the ONLY thing "amateur" about it.

However it's very obvious that it takes little to "outwit" you, Frankie.

One, No, it's not "another topic".

The soldiers at Abu Gharib shold have REPORTED THE INFRACTIONS via the chain of command.

> even were he tried and found

Markie...He WAS tried and found guilty!

Twice! Indicted, tried and CONVICTED!

> you have presented nothing that allows you to state

Almost right, Markie!

>>I<< didn't "present" it...FRANKIE did! He's the one who made the "#####bird PFC" comment which, on "cross examination" led to the discovery that he's twice convicted for violations of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Mind you that the Marines would much rather send a "junior trooper" to Office Hours, whichn in the Marine Corps are Article 15 proceedings. In other words, letting the commander of the unit handle the incident at the lowest echelon.

Courts maritals are reserved for the real idiots or the specially grevious charges.

Since it's apparent that Frankie didn't spend any time in Leavenworth, we can safely put him in the "real idiot" category.

His conduct in this forum corroborates that.

You can't speak for the Army, either, Markie.

"teaching"

Naw...We were basically told that the phrase dusbiously attributed to General George S Patton, that it was a soldiers duty not to die for hiscountry, but to make the other SOB die for his.

USMC attitudes on this are that if you let those four guys carry that fifth guy off the battlefield, there will be five guys to worry about later. Better to kill them all now than to ahve to face them a second time.

So, better you quit trying to figure out who you're "speaking for", Markie.

Sure there is!

He provided a partial copy of his DD214 here. In order to have gotten a DD214, he had to have been sworn in in the first place.

Sure it's a lie.

He alleges to have some great "contacts", even dropping LtCol
Oliver North's name as if they were bunk buddies.

If he HAD those kind of contacts, he could corroborate the information given to him.

He's not doen it, prefering to call me "Dudly" and further substantiating my claims that his courts martials were probably warranted on several levels!

He called HIMSELF a "####bird PFC" and admitted to his two courts martials.

There was nothing there for me to distort if I wanted to!

Again...I was asked for specifics...I gave them.

WHAT are you talking about, Markie?

No, I didn't.

Frankie claims I didn't seerve in the Marines. I've given him units, dates of boot camp including units and locations, and even my promotion boards dates and precedent numbers.

He claims to have "contacts".

Obviously he doesn't.

That substantiates my claim of LIAR.

Coslo, "Ace WH2T", Alun N3KIP, Dan W4NTI, Kim W5TIT, Dave K8MN, Jim AA2AQ, John K KC2HMZ, Bert WA2SI. If we go into the Wiseman crowd, we "regulars".

Two things...Stop posting and there won't be any #### here.

Secondly, YOU stated that when >>I<< did that, it was infringing your "freedom of speech".

And just this very day you claimed that >>I<< keep "changing the

So...from now on I will go back to my old practice of trimming out

HE SAID he was never granted an appeal, Markie.

>>I<< made the point of suggesting that his after-the-fact findings of "evidence" that supported his arguments warranted a new opening of the case. Frankie said "that wasn't possible".

His innocense is some after-the-fact presentation of evidence that allegedly mitigates the prosecutions case...But Frankie can't/won't get it fixed.

If I'd been falsely prosecuted/convicted in a court martial and later had material come into my hands that substantiated that evidence, I'd be a screaming banshee at my lawyer's office to get it fixed.

Sure I do.

YOU claim that there is no evidence of Frank's having sworn an oath to uphold the Constitution of the United States and to obey the orders of those appointed over him.

I pointed out that FRANKIE provided the "evidence".

Sorry YOU don't want to hear it.

It's a blatant lie. Frankie the Coward has point-blank stated my references to the contrary.

It has everything to do withn it, Markie.

Otherwise you're claiming that EVERY unit commander, officer-in-charge, Sergeant Major and NOCIC I served with lied about my service.

So...How do you explain that?

Yes, Mark, you ARE a cheat.

The Colonel Episode was a prime example.

In the Marine Corps it means I did my job.

Failing to do your job is a breach of discipline.

A breach of discipline means no GCM.

His words say he was court martialed twice. Convicted twice.
Hence his discharge as a Private First Class when he SHOULD have been a Sergeant.

I can speak English as native tounge and two others with moderate comprehension.

"Gibberish" is not one of them.

Markie, he asked for specifics. I GAVE him PROOF.

Frankie alleges having contacts that allow him to "know" all these details about USMC personnel.

Obviously he lied about THAT too.

Nope.

I gave him references. Just like I would if I was applying for a job.

He asked. It was incumbent upon HIM to verify what I told him.

Absolutely.

He can't seem to verify those references. Obvioulsy his claims were false.

Hi,

I have a Cobra 29 LTD Classic that i use on the road. I bought it a year ago just for listening and now I have met a few pals and would like to be able to talk to them more. My problem is that this radio is untouched. No mods or anything. I've been told thats a good thing. I was told rather than have it tuned I should just get an amp.

Could someone tell me seriously what I need to have done to this radio for me to be able to transmit and receive further? It's nothing fancy just a Cobra 29 LTD Classic, Stock Mic, and a Wilson 1000 antenna.

Money coming soon, and I plan to do whatever needed as long as it's not very expensive to get this radio up and running better than it is now. I hope someone can help me out, and point me to a good site that I can purchase this AMP from at a reasonable price.

Only a deviant who think's having another man's excrement on his genitals is "acceptable" would think that.

Oooops! >>I<< forgot to "consider the source"...You DO think it's acceptable...

So far you've not "won" anything to have had a bet won on, Markie.

That's because you're an idiot, Markie.

"problem"

A "stuck mike", or your pet cat Garfield sitting on the keyer paddles is "a fine", Markie...

Repeatedly jamming the net, demanding to be given net control, etc, are worthy of revocation, fine AND jail time. The feds SHOULD have shown up with Marshals and confiscated every last electronic device on the property capable of generating RF after that.

> I mean they have to go through the motion of turn the NAL into

They don't have to "do" anything. Baxter did it all on his own.
He should be prohibited from any/all FCC licensure and/or operation under any established Part.

If y'alls ever in richmond, va on ch 19AM, don't talk to this knappy headed nigga. He one of dem folks from P'burg, VA (Central State Hospital)

He calls hisself Mr. Left Lane Leroy, Mr Food Stamp but his real name is "Tyrone". He da same character and he be havin' conversations wit' hisself.

He just jealous 'cause he don't got no truck driver job.
So, he pretend he a truck driver and then he'll switch it up and start ta "run game" on a truck driver by complainin' 'bout them askin' fo' radio checks every day.

I gots me a tape recorder and I will post some audio of him talkin' along with others that be keyin' down and droppin them mauls on his ass.

I don't stress over it, I be laughin' my ass off when I play the tape back. An' he got the most sorriest excuse fo' a rogerbeep --- it's like a squeal.

You simply need to turn the AM deadkey down to about 2 watts. Most amps will not allow more than 4 watts input. Some are HD (high drive) amps that will allow up to 12 watts. But that is all you have to do. No mods or clipping.

I have a Palomar 225, which you can get for under $100. Works fine. I have heard Texas Star being the best quality of the small amps. They make a HD model.

Sounds like there are some ego-maniacs at work here. I don't see any reason for most of this other than wanting publicity. I do not know anything about K1MAN, other than the fact he is trying to be the Howard Stern of Ham radio, or that is the way it appears to me.

What ever happened to simple plain DXing with other fellow hams?

that is what some of the postere want you to think at any rate looking past the noise he seems to be an obnoxious fellow who has choosen to test the limits at the FCC. not what I call wise to do so but US law

That is exactly what it appears to me from what I have been reading. He is doing nothing more than being anti-establishment or anti-government.

Everyone to his own, I guess. Like I said. I am perfectly happy DXing with other fellow hams, without testing limits or pushing authority.

Quite right. The oath requires you to perform any -LEGAL- order given to you by your superiors. This was the issue during the Iran-Contra scam when Ollie claimed he was just following orders and didn't care if his actions were legal or not (although I'm sure he knew they were illegal). That's blind obedience and it's wrong.

Me, but Dudly didn't have all the facts. I pled guilty at the first court-martial and so was never tried.

And that's exactly what I did for the second infraction. I forced a summary court-martial so the facts regarding the case would be a matter of record.

For once Dudly is right. There were no appeals and both convictions stand. The vindication of my second infraction was the result of a seperate entry made as the result of a review that I requested after my discharge. The violation leading to the conviction was found to have "mitigating circumstances that should have been considered [by the presiding officer] but were not," and that I "was denied evidence, and the opportunity to gather and present certain evidence" relevant to my defense. The conviction was not overturned (since it was not an appeal) but my conduct marks were adjusted accordingly, and my discharge upgraded to Honorable.

Oh, I'm sure he served alright. And I'm sure he served all of 18 years as he claimed. But I'm also sure that his time was spent almost entirely in garrison, that nothing on his record is outstanding, that he probably got a few Page 11 entries, and that his discharge was not an honorable retirement but a general discharge, probably for medical reasons (suggested by his current career in the medical field, which, according to statistics gathered by psychologists, happens to be the preferred occupational field for hypochondriacs). In other words, he served 18 years as a sick-bay commando. Certainly nothing to be proud of, nothing to brag about, and nothing he will ever publically admit.

Hence his silence about his "military career". And the epitath that will be imprinted on his tombstone will be, "I Told You I Was Sick", just like the one I saw on a PBS special last night.

Just let Dudly keep running his mouth -- the more he talks the more he proves that he's a socially isolated misfit with serious psychological issues. He's like a cat in a box: shake the box and he thrashes around for a while. Let him calm down then shake the box again. Heck, that's better entertainment than anything on TV!!!

The hatred being spewed here is all too common in ham radio today and represents what this once great hobby has degenerated into.

When rational minds prevail, virtually all informed sources, both in and out of the FCC, agree that legal precedent is clearly on the side of Mr Baxter, and in the final analysis, Mr Baxter will carry the day, much to the chagrin of his detractors.

Does anyone know where to get parts for an RM-60M Astron power supply?
Astron corp may not want to help me. I may need a power transformer to to replace the old one. Thanks

I realize that it is hard for you to comprehend that, with me being a CBer.
Challenging a belief system can be tough. Like your belief that all CBers are to stupid to pass the ham test, that we sit around all day swilling beer and saying "ten-fer good buddy". Or my favorite belief you hold, "I have a ham ticket, that makes me special."

Why on earth would anyone want to pass an Amateur test to talk to guys like this is beyond me. At least with CB you can have a laugh and also use it sensibly without having to dedicate your whole life to the bloody thing.... Those people who look down on CB because they are amateurs really...really need to get out and experience some life..... and i dont mean down to the ham rallys to buy some more of someones junk to fill their houses with. Not all Amateurs are like this but theres a lot that are, and a lot of them sit in these newsgroups trying to prove something. Sad old farts....

I find that those who brag about their IQs is about all they have to brag about. I know people with IQs higher then yours who couldn't find their way to the bathroom and back without help, so what does you IQ prove? Nothing.

As far as knowing more about radio, I converted my first transmitter, a Heath DX-60 from controlled carrier AM (you even know what controlled carrier AM is without looking it up?) to high level plate modulation (you even know what high level plate modulation is without looking it up?). I once designed and built my own SSB 80-10 meter transmitter plus many other pieces of ham equipment. Also constructed a 15 meter three element beam using gamma matching (you even know what gamma matching is without looking it up?). What have you designed and built for your 'good buddy ten-fer ther' cb hobby, mister IQ?

That's downright silly. Y'all gotta have time to put the hammer down and find y'all's selves a convoy and spot them smokeys from the rockin' chair.
Then y'all gotta test y'all's leenyars by ratchet-jawin' "Walk Walk Walk On Yooooooooooooooo" on channels 6 through 34 simultaneously. (That means "at the same time".)

Those jackass's don't read rrcb, they only cross-post to it. Is it a coincidence that it's them same jackass's that flame CBer's at every opportunity? I think not.

There are -really- cool ham radio operators that read rrcb and never post to it, also. (they email me)

rrcb has had fewer flames recently, than it's had in recent memory...cept for the hams cross-posting to it.

They can't give up their roots.

"non-cirizens". If everyone is in jail, Kiley can "gaurd" them, Colonel.

There's guys reading this that can tell you more about him, I'd guess if he was talking on your local channel you'd likely hear him.

Some of those dawgs that used to superbowl it, don't so much anymore. I was never into AM much except back in the 70's, or on the highway myself, but there's been some big dawgs over the years in rrcb. (pics of some -big-stuff still float thru)

Give me SSB,100 watts and a good antenna. :)

as point of fact US Law does NOT require any to obey them is simply provides for penalities if you choose to break them , and get caught, and have DA (or other figure as approprate) choose to file charges and after the full due process is gone through proof of the exist in the way companies sometimes choose to pay fins rather than comply with dumping rules for example.

BTW as I said NO US LAW or Reg requires or punishses a lack of wisdom

Thanks for the comeback,

Well Magnuml,

The greatest and most honest electronics technician in the USA, Mr. Lorberg, fixed my old Cobra 148 GTL for only $35.00 All the lights and switches work, the needle moves again when I click transmit. He put a new plug on to fit in the cigarette lighter.

All in all, I suspect I saved quite a bit of money instead of paying nearly $200.00 for the new one which looks the same on the outside.

Do you think there is $150.00 of difference in the distance they will transmit, or how they will sound?

You simply need to turn the AM deadkey down to about 2 watts. Most amps will not allow more than 4 watts input. Some are HD (high drive) amps that will allow up to 12 watts. But that is all you have to do. No mods or clipping.
(Money coming soon, and I plan to do whatever needed as long as it's not very expensive to get this radio up and running better than it is now. I hope someone can help me out, and point me to a good site that I can purchase this AMP from at a reasonable price.)

I have a Palomar 225, which you can get for under $100. Works fine. I have heard Texas Star being the best quality of the small amps. They make a HD model.

I have a President Washington CB. The am, lsb, usb knob or button is hard to turn. Their nothing wrong with the knob. Maybe only the design. It too round and I can not get a good grip on it. Often I use a cloth to grip it to turn.

Now, I am thinking about taking off the knob and replacing it with a chicken head or what ever more narrow knob I would find.

I would like to know if I could simply use a small flat driver and pry off the knob?

I hope that I do not have to open up the radio.

Well I call it a Channel Area List. For example, lets say you just moved to Tampa Florida and you have a CB radio, well, it would be nice & cool to find a list that could tell you which Channels are for which areas or purpose.

We already know that 9 is for emergencies, 19 for truckers and 36 & 38 is for DX.

If any one know if something like this aldready exist, please let me know where I could find it.

Also, are Cbers still using the 10 codes?

Thank you, SR

The knob may just lift off, or it may have a set screw that must be backed off before removing the knob.

I can not pry off the knob, it's too in the radio. I am now trying to see it I could make some kind of a small clamp that can work as a lever.
This would give me leverage to turn to the knob for ssb operations.

Any ideas?

I remember I once had this same problem with the Cobra 148 GTL. I think the reason why they made all of the knobs this way was because they were probably competing with am/fm stereos radio during the disco era, that had fine looking knobs.

Perhaps these may had been the first radios, when expensive shinny looking machine made knobs became the new style.

When you look back to the Hammarlund, Grundig and Hallicrafters you see a big difference in the style of knobs. Vanity vs performance!

I wonder if this was a break off from the Puritanical style, as you would notice in furniture.

Although having a lighted red needle is very cool too!

Oh, yeah, you gotta miss the '70's. Turnin' those shiny silver knobs and listenin' to Electric Light Orchestra and what not.

Heck, as I recall, TV's Good Times found itself infected with the '70's CB craze... when Michael started chatting with some paraplegic gal on Bookman's CB radio.

I didn't see your previous posts sooner or I would have replied as I had the same situation a few years back with a condo association. No antennas of any kind. It is easier to ask forgiveness than permission. I was able to erect a concrete in a bucket setup with a hidden ground rod in the back hedge that remained attached to the base of a metal piece of mast that put the base of the antenna just over the roofline. I just leaned it up against the house at night and left the bottom section attached to the pole and made sure to lay it down in daylight. It's Crude but it works. The antenna I used was the old A99 as it was a LOT easier to handle than a I2000.
I have heard of people using these antennas horizontally, yet I could never get a decent SWR match in an attic location. Please let us know if you try this and succeed.
That old setup worked well for about a year. The drawback is backyard stealth commando radio which sucks.
Good Luck!

I wouldnt have thought so. The last Cobra UK29 LTD ST that i bought though cost me ?40 GBP mint in the box. It glows lovely in the dark but i think the sound tracker bit is pants...unless my one is a bit faulty. I have no idea how much they cost in the states but having yourself a great rig doctor makes all the difference when you look at older rigs so your lucky.
Then again it depends what you want in life. I personally dont understand people spending many thousands of pounds on old bangers (cars) and doing them up. The ride is no better than when the car was made, its bumpy and doesnt have any mod cons... id rather have a newer model and to heck with old bangers... but thats just me... some people feel the same about Cbs. They would prefer something modern and all singing all dancing rather than a piece of old nostalgic Cb history. Other people wouldnt touch new CB stuff and stick with the old favorites. Nothing personal, its horses for courses. One mans meat is another mans poison as they say...

Not sure if you guys can answer this but ill ask on the offchance anyhow. This radio in the UK has mid, high and UK40 as standard and when they come new they work on UK40 only and you cant access mid and high.

Does anyone know how to open this rig up to do what it suppsed to? I would guess, like the Superstar 3900FM and the Nato 2000FM, it will be something pretty simple (simple being if you know what it is) landlines, cells,power down but CB still works. Got to CH 19 and got some good local info on open gas stations with fuel before the average joes and I was able to fill my tank and gas jugs. Switch to my other channel and I make contact with family who also dont have phone.

Thanks in Advance,

My base is on and open. CH 19 is active, and a local neighborhood channel has opened up for local chitchat, info etc.

So much for Ham radio being the disaster recovery solution. I wonder how well those repeaters are doing lol.

777. K1MAN ESSAY: E051028A - WELCOME AARA AND IARN - HAM RADIO WILL DIE WITHOUT THEM

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb
Date: 2005-10-28 20:41:33 UTC
From: netmanager2@yahoo.com
Message-ID: <1130532093.885944.310370@g44g2000cwa.googlegroups.com>

Cross-posted to: rec.radio.amateur.policy,rec.radio.amateur.misc,rec.radio.amateur.dx,rec.radio.cb

K1MAN ESSAY: E051028A

I have heard some of my greatest detractors say on the air (when they didn't consider that I might just happen too be listening) things something like:

1. "Glenn is so talented, but ...."

2. "Glenn is so bright, but ...."

3. "Glenn has the best bulletin service, but ...."

4. "Glenn did such a great job on such-and-such emergency, but....."

5. "Glenn could be an alternative to ARRL, but....................."

6. "Glenn could have been so big, but........................."

The problem is that nobody can please all the people all the time, and if you try to do anything really significant in life, you are going to piss a lot of other people off, no matter what. Church politics is a good example of this, and I see no difference regarding hobby politics in particular and ham radio politics in general.

Typically, those who try to make major changes in the world get "hung," so to speak, (like Socrates, Galileo, or Jesus), or else THEY do the hanging (like Alexander the Great, Stalin, or Hitler). Other people just find some middle ground somewhere, while still others do next to nothing "spectacular" and cross their fingers while hoping they don't "get run over." Most people sincerely think that others would do much better if they just did it THEIR way.

The fact is that everybody is right and everybody is wrong. Whatever works best for you is all that you have unless you make major mid course "corrections" from time to time. Some make frequent minor "corrections" to best fit the changing world being experienced. Who has more fun than people?

Lots of people manipulate and even abuse their way around life. Everyone "manipulates" others to some degree, of course, but here again, this goes from one end of the spectrum to the other. If you buy flowers for your wife, aren't you trying to "manipulate" her? If you do unto others as you would have them do unto you, aren't you really trying to manipulate them?

One thing common to most humans in particular and mammals in general is the desire to be loved and accepted. People need to be recognized. Scientific American for November 2005 has an interesting article about how the brain comes up with the feeling of "self." The fact is that we have a very poor understanding of how the brain works, much less how the universe works.

I still cannot fathom why ALL hams don't welcome an on the air hf amateur information bulletin service on 20 and 80 meters. Free information! Listen to it in the shack while you are soldering a connection. Call in your comments, unedited, to an 800 number. A wide variety of information including Newsline and RAIN. Taped Dayton forums, interviews, hard hitting editorials, etc. etc. A great beacon station to evaluate propagation! The answer is simply "hobby politics" which overrides common sense. Jealousy! The human need to be recognized and to feel important. If the bulletin service threatens this self image the of the self importance of another person, that person is against it, apparently. This is why humans have wars and kill each other. They just can't agree on what is best for all concerned. They can't accommodate much at all. Doesn't make much sense to me, but I do recognize that it is a very common reality. Such is life! Being a wild animal wouldn't seem to be so bad, by comparison, it would seem to me!

Now, don't you feel more important already? Let's see, let's tune across 20 meters. Not much there anymore is there? Not much diversity. No wonder amateur radio is dying! 73 and GL.

A lot of people diss CB as a dying and outdated hobby but its times like these you realise how you depend on modern technology and ..how your buggered when it goes tits up... (english expression there ;o) it goes to show how useful CB can actually be. People often say why bother, theres the internet and mobile phones now.... these people have no idea of the benefits of CB, sure there are a few idiots on air but you bump into them wherever you go. It can never be replaced by mobile phones or the net..... all three can exsist in their own context with their own benefits and pitfalls. CB cant actually be replaced with these, likewise the net and mobile phones cant be replaced by CB's. Nothing wrong with using all 3. Ill never be without a CB, mobile phone or the net. (hopefully) .

Care to give some details like what method of SSB generation this here radio will use? Will this be a transmitter or tranceiver? What will the IF frequency be? To go with your linear? So you are just another law

I have heard similar things in other parts of the country. In some cases, it may be from someone with a speech problem. It is possible that people have heard it and copied it just to take the pss.

Around here, you can hear differences in accents with people just a few miles apart. In this small town people often have a broad accent. In another town, only about 6 miles away, the accent is not so strong. Then, there is the city accent.
Those in the city are often refered to as "Di-Dahs", and it is not uncommon to hear people immitate certain words with other local accents.

Depending on where he is and who is present, my old man tends to switch accents or put on some "posh" accent. When visiting family around his home town (my birth town), he tends to go all "ooh-aahh" farmer Joe. When visiting us, he tends to fake certain words as if to act "upper-class".
There are certain words which only seem to be used locally, and words that are pronounced in totally different ways, so he starts things off. However, having been brought up with a mixture of accents, my Son has a great time with this. Nobody is safe from his mimicking. When my children get going together with funny voices and accents, they are a real hoot to listen to.

There are also some words which tend to have my children in fits of laughter... like hospice.
If you don't see the joke, don't worry, it's all in the accent...

Why, so that you can abuse people behind their back? What would be the point

I would bet that, if this was cross-posted to *real" tech groups, many qualified engineers would also be offended by your suggestion that you are a "higher" level of person.

Playing field? So this is nothing more than a game to you, see who can cause the most offence.

Your problem is that you are blaming the wrong people.
Maybe this is all just an excuse, a cover for your hatred of CB, nothing to do with Amateur rules. Otherwise you would direct your comments and anger at those making the changes.

> However, having said that, the material quoted below

You write a message which anyone of at least average intelligence will know will offend certain groups of people, then pretend to be shocked when some respond angrily. You may be a Ham, but that doesn't mean you can act.

Before putting the angry response down to "CB mentality", take a look through the Google archives at all the serious abuse sent to newsgroups by some licensed Amateurs.
Six of one, half a dozen of the other.

It IS your intention to insult them, just behind their backs so you run less risk of them replying. Your post was not really intended as an "FAQ", it was purely a relatively "safe" release for your personal anger.

If you must start seeing this as a class system, look up "Amateur" in a dictionary.
Please consider the meaning of the word before suggesting that an "Amateur" is above the professionals who design and build equipment to the standards set by Governments, standards far above that required by an amateur producing equipment for his own personal use.

Comparing, as you call them, "disgraceful Class Ber's" to 6 year old children is clearly intended to insult people.

Please think before displaying such ignorance and stupidity by blaming CBers for the rules... they have absolutely NO CONTROL over such matters. CBers neither set the rules nor claim to represent "members", that woukld be Ofcom and the RSGB.

CBers do NOT see Amateur and CB as "sisters", it is people like the RSGB, the RA and Ofcom and a certain magazine publisher who see it that way and make decisions to mix, combine and change rules and formats.
Any sensible CBer would prefer to keep Amateur and CB separate, as they are separate services for totally different purposes.

If you must get so angry, do yourself a couple of favours...
1. Blame and whine at the correct people, those able to make the changes.
2. Watch your blood pressure, OM.

I agree with keeping the Amateur requirements higher. I agree that it is now too simple, and has been for some years. I believe that Amateur radio should be for those with a real interest in radio, and tests should be set to allow those people through - not to get the licence figures up.
But it's pointless blaming people for taking what is on offer, sitting the test required to get their licence.

Peter.

<kb9rqz@yahoo.com> wrote...
>
> you think a gang rape esp of a 14 yo is not something to get upset
> about.

You mean, the alleged rape.
Last I heard, there was no police report of such an event and no victim had come forward.

From TV reports, it would seem that the "Black community" is pssed off with the "Asian community" taking over the area, owning all the shops. As one person said, "you cannot find a black person serving in a shop".
Black community, white community, Asian community, Muslim community...
We are no longer a nation of common people, no longer a group of local communities, we see ourselves as belonging to a specific "community" related to our colour or religion, and many see it as a competition between these "communities"... to the point of it becoming a war.

For years now, we have told certain people that they are victims. Laws have been made to protect certain people from the big bad white man. We have given the impression that we are all filled with hatred for any non-white or non-Christian, and laws need to stop us being so.

An Asian is made aware of the TV camera and allowed to remain anonymous while he puts out a message of hate for the British, promising to carry out a suicide attack before he reaches 40. On the other hand, BNP members are secretly filmed, named, shamed, arrested, their assets are frozen and they are put in court for speaking in a private meeting about "twatting" Asians.
The government claim that there are no laws against Muslim extremists preaching hatred and violence against the British, they are merely practicing "free speech". Only when a white extremist speaks of voilence does it become racism.
But, we all know that you have to be white to be racist.

The latest idea is to blame the anger on poverty. Muslims are said to be angry because they are in poverty.
These people need to look around them, plenty of unemployed and low paid people are white and non-Muslim. Do employers really refuse to employ Muslims? Do they pay Muslims less than they would non-Muslims of white people? Do Muslims or Asians get less dole money than white Christians?
NO, No and NO.
They blame this "poverty" on poor education. Do schools turn away Muslims or non-whites? Do they teach such people in separate classes? Do they give them lower level teachers?
NO, NO and NO.
Certain schools and certain areas have been known for years as poverty stricken and poorly educated. It's nothing to do with race or religion, but only now do they even consider it a problem - because they can use it as a race issue, when it is not.

Regardless of race or religion, every citizen is offered the same education and the same chance of the same job opportunities for the same pay. If they do not take what is on offer, that is nobody's fault, it's their choice. If employers start actively seeking certain minority group members to artificially boost the figure, that would be racial discrimination.
Some would call that "positive" discrimination, but tell that to the person who was rejected because they were too white.
Any discrimination is discrimination.

It's one thing to think you are being discriminated against, but our approach simply backs up the FALSE notion that white people are all well educated and rich, while non-whites have nothing.
Naturally, when servicing the chip on their shoulder, they will not consider the question of which "community" has most of the "corner shops" in this country. Over the road to me, there is one of these "corner shops". Some time back, when the previous owner was moving, the shop became available. I doubt if any of the "rich, well educated whities" living here could have afforded to buy it... so some "poverty-stricken, poorly educated" Asians have it.
Why do they have it? Simple, they had the money, know-how and determination required to run a local store. Which kind of blows that stereotype theory out of the window.

If the black Brummies feel that Asians have all the shops, they need to ask why this is the case. The Asians did NOT take or steal them, they purchased or set up the business. Just as the Asians have equal education and employment rights, so we all have the same rights to buy or set up businesses.
It is not the fault of the Asians if the black or white "communities" are not taking those opportunities. If they want some black owned businesses, they must buy or set up such businesses.
There is the problem that you need to have enough money to start up or buy the business. For someone in a poor family, the chance of escaping that poverty has to be low - you need money to make money. However, if someone really wants it, they will find a way... start small, borrow, form a partnership, etc.
It has never been easier to set up a business for a minimal outlay. As well as free advice being available through business advice organisations, the Internet allows business opportunities on an international level at a very low cost.
Can you say "Ebay"?

Regards,

Peter.

No, you ASSUME that.
The fact is that he is well known on CB groups and has a CB Radio Web site (which is nearly as good as mine), which shows why he uses these groups - a genuine interest in CB.

I can still see problems.

If I run power, causing enough interference to get noticed, they will have no problems marching into my home and taking what they like.
Can you see them marching into a mosque and confiscating equipment?

Once there is the possibility of race or religion coming into it, and someone may scream "discrimination" or "racism", nobody will dare to step in and stop it.

Peter.

Personal experience from a major minitornado that left my county without power - and most gas stations thus dead - for 4-14 days several years ago. Area hams quickly organized on 146.52 simplex - effectively blanketing much of this 20x10 mile county - and organized a self-help effort among ourselves as to what few gas stations and stores were in business, etc.
Yes, CB long has been the "alternate party line" in remote areas just too remote for phone service for homes - notably in Alaska bush and delta Louisiana (before Katrina even).
All this proves is that BOTH 2-meter ham and CB will have a major role after phone service is wiped out in any really major disaster - and to find places with stuff, know what roads are open, etc. And FRS/GMRS will similarly become an alternate party line in small towns that won't have phone service restored for a month or more - especially in smaller cities - as it's so easy to get on the air and coded squelch will allow lots of networks to coexist in a small area.

You have to be white to be racist, it's the law.
If an Asian hates the British, he will only be filmed with his permission and will be allowed to protect his identity while he puts out threats against us on national TV.
On the other hand, white people will be secretly filmed, publicly named, shamed, have their assets frozen and be put in court... if they live that long.

But that's just part of the problem.
Racism, racist, and racial discrimiation are wonderful words and phrases. Using any of these is like playing a joker or a trump card. If you don't like the person's opinions, just use one of those phrases... as long as your opponent is white. If you want to commit a crime, blame your behavior on the "racist oppression" you suffer. Put up such a big wall of "racism" claims, making it such a dirty word, that nobody will dare to oppose you in case they get labeled as racist.
Use of such words and phrases can also relieve you of any need to actually get off your arse and do something for yourself. Just blame someone else for your problems and demand that they or the government sort out your life for you.

As long as we keep telling people that they are victims, they will act like victims and look for someone to blame. We all have equal rights to education, employment, business ownership, housing, home ownership and our choice of religion. We need to stop treating certain people like they are victims, or in some way inferior, and cannot survive without the constant help of the white man.

On TV this morning, someone from a business was saying how there is a shortage of gas fitters.
They will employ anyone - black, white, Asian, male, female - as long as they can do the job.
Yet, as she says, females and Asians are not bothering... who's fault is that?

Someone needs to tell these minority groups and the "do-gooders" who feel that they must treat these people like babies that they already have equal rights, there's nothing more to give them, it's now up to them to make the effort.

Regards,
Peter.

Ahhhhh...Let's MINIMALIZE it and call it an "infraction".

You are not charged with "infractions" at a court martial. It's an "offense".

No "for once", Frankie. I've had you nailed for weeks now. Sorry

"Vindication" only in that you allow yourself that "warm fuzzy" for it. It has no legal bearing.

And it was your second OFFENSE..."infractions" are dealt with at Article 15. You, by your own admission, blew that off.

Let's talk about standards, Dudly. For instance, how do you feel about a Marine who serves barely a month out of each year for 18 years, yet ascends through the ranks as quickly as one who serves active duty during the same time? Do you think that those are equal standards? I don't think you do, Dudly, and neither does anyone else who served during the time that you "served".

And let's take this "standard" thing a bit further. What do you think of a Marine who suddenly aquires a chronic medical problem that would conveniently prevent him from serving in the first Gulf War should his unit be called to active duty? And what if that medical problem wasn't serious enough to prevent him from joining the CAP after being discharged? I am not alone in thinking that Marine is a coward who shirked his responsibilities and skated out of his oath.

Just one more "standard", Dudly..... have you ever heard of "guilt by association"? I'm sure you have. But there is also a thing called "credit by association", where someone claims credit for the honorable actions of others for no reason other than the fact that he is allowed to wear the same uniform. You wouldn't know anyone who would do such a thing, would you, Dudly? Like maybe someone who claims to have been personally involved in "seven hostile actions" when it was really some -other- Marines who were digging the red mud out of their boots in Beirut?

You have never disclosed your reservist status because you wanted the respect earned by those who made the Marines a proud organization, but you never earned that respect by performing the same duties. And you chickened out of your oath and your responsibility to your country when it came time to put your ass on the line. Yet you have the gall to sit your fat ass and criticize -me-, an honorably discharged Beirut vet, just because I got into a couple scrapes. Steve, you are an honor-thief, a malingering coward, and a sniveling sack of shit.

>Gunny "Weekend Warrior" Dudly, K4YZ

You had your chance to fess up and now you've been outed. Nobody likes you and nobody ever will. Do the right thing for once in your life and go away.

Wrong. A trial is used to determine guilt. I pleaded guilty so there was no trial; i.e, I was never "tried". You couldn't learn that much with a quick google search? That's pathetic.

Wrong again, Dudly. The proceedings and evidence are not recorded for

What's "pathetic" is your attempts to minimize the fact that you're a disgraced, courtmartialed EX Marine, who's only reconcilliation with having BEEN a Marine is to try an undermine others.

Basically, you're a punk, Frankie.

Perhaps. But the CONVICTIONS still stand. Convictions that may keep you from federal contracts and/or security clearances should you need one for contract work in the future.

There's no "semantics" to it, Frankie. And I could care less

I can see it on paper yes but i guess when it comes to reality the lefties will put their oars in and the police will be ordered not to upset the local community etc.. so in the end they will probably knock on the door, be told to "die infidel scum" then go away again with their tail between their legs.

Its wrong but.... unfortunately true.. to deal with the minority will.. unfortunately incite the rest of the community and the fact that the original few law breakers were doing wrong will make no difference at all..
it would become a rascist issue full stop.

Pete, Thanks for a very well balanced and well presented view. If only people would stop and think about their lives, the things that happen around them and the choices they "could" make if they got off their backsides and did something about it instead of continually whining and seeing the negative things in life their lives and that of the people around them would be so much better.

Thats for all colours and creeds...

Care to give some details like what method of SSB generation this here radio will use? Will this be a transmitter or tranceiver? What will the IF frequency be? To go with your linear? So you are just another law breaking cber I see.

LEGAL UPDATE FROM THE AMERICAN AMATEUR RADIO ASSOCIATION (AARA) AND INTERNATIONAL AMATEUR RADIO NETWORK (IARN) LEGAL DEPARTMENT:

AARA is literally flooded these days with E-Mails and calls regarding K1MAN's on going battle with the FCC. A trip to a local law library has been recommended to hundreds of people. Look at 47 CFR Part 1, Subparts A and B. Of particular interest has been 47 CFR Pt. 1.62:

"(a)(1) Where there is pending before the Commission at the time of expiration of license any proper and timely application for renewal
of license with respect to any activity of a continuing nature (such as amateur radio), in accordance with the provisions of section 9(b)
of the Administrative Procedures Act, such license shall remain in effect until such time as the Commission shall make a final determination with respect to the renewal application."

The FCC has acknowledged K1MAN's timely filed renewal application on their web site. Look up K1MAN on www.QRZ.com and click on FCC INFO.

If Hollingsworth and Company try and argue in court that Granting K1MAN's recent timely filed renewal application and then "setting it
aside" the very next day constitutes "final determination with respect to the renewal application," thus satisfying 47 CFR Pt. 1.62 and the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution which guarantees due process of law, they will lose in the D.C. Court of Appeals if not lose in front of a Commission Administrative Law Judge. Just doing nothing more than "setting the license aside," as they have so pathetically tried so far, is not going to "cut it" at IARN and AARA, and K1MAN has no other choices other than to "give up on America" (not in this lifetime!) or to continue operating under 47 CFR Pt. 1.62 (2):

"A licensee operating by virtue of this paragraph shall, after
the date of expiration in the license, post, in addition to the original license, any acknowledgment received from the Commission that the renewal application has been accepted for filing.

Note that the FCC web site lists K1MAN's renewal application as "PENDING." A printout of this has been posted next to K1MAN's original (now expired) license per 47 CFR 1.62 (2), and K1MAN on air operations continue under this entitled authority.

Secondly, federal law does not allow anything alleged in an unpaid NAL to be brought up in any other proceeding such as a renewal hearing or revocation hearing. The April 2005 $21,000 NAL against K1MAN has not been affirmed by the Commission and is illegal anyway since the substantive issues therein are the same as the ones in the unpaid 1990 NALs illegally "deep sixed" by the Commission years ago.

America is a land of laws and not of cheap and corrupt men like Hollingsworth and Company. He must have been sick on the day they taught law at law school, wherever that might have been. He should have gotten a note from his mother and made up that ENTIRE day! How much of YOUR tax money has poorly educated Hollingsworth and Company wasted already on old K1MAN? If there are valid issues with K1MAN (or W1AW and ARRL), let's go to court and be done with it. I will even buy Hollingsworth's lunch! Until that day comes, K1MAN continues to operate on the air under entitled authority CFR 47 Pt. 1.62. 73 and GL de K1MAN

The expiration date which is being quoted for Mr Baxter's license is meaningless. Mr Baxter's legal team has established legal precedent that he can continue to operate legally past this date.

Anyone who thinks the ARRL, the FCC, or Hollingsworth have the best interests of ham radio in mind, is in bad need of a reality check.

No, not all chicken banders are law breakers, but a very large portion are.

If Dr IQ is running an external linear he certainly is. If he is going to build a cb transmitter, which will not be type accepted and put it on the air he certainly will be.

Type approved.... hmm, its a bit of a strange one that ... which makes me think "type approved" for Amateur is something home made from bits of anything.... not tested by anyone... just soldered together by an Amateur so it must be perfect ...right? No spurious emmisions or any interference because the person cobbling it together is an Amateur..... Now no disrespect here is aimed at Amateurs, just some of the laws governing the hobby seem to be crazy. Amateurs building their own kit and having it tested via some professional body before use i can accept.... but does that ticket mean you can build your own "boots" and use it no matter how bad it may be made? It seems so..... sod type approval eh. Or were you just relating to "licence conditions"
I know a few Amateurs who are law breakers too. Using their illegally adapted Amateur equipment to listen in to CB frequencies i believe is a NO
NO, unless you have a CB licence... to which would Amateurs actually bother to get a CB licence? Are the radios actually legal to use on the CB bands?? i dont know 100% so i ask the question. We all do things from time to time that are deemed illegal.... so your statement on "No, not all chicken banders are law breakers, but a very large portion are" could be said against any group of people.

Whats your opinion on M3's? Do you encorage them or see them as a stain on Amateur radio? Im just curious by the way.

Regards,
Graham

It was a well thought out piece of typing. It didnt seem insulting to me in any way... childish insults.... seems that a few Amateurs on this newsgroup do nothing but "childish insults" which are normally aimed at the CB'ers because, like you, they have no real point to put. They just want to feel clever and superior. Believe me... your not.... your far from it.
So why dont you address the points Pete actually put or do they ring so true in your ears you have no answer to give .... i think so...

Maybe the rules are different where you are, but in the US amateurs can construct any of their equipment, but it is their responsibility to test it and make sure it operates legally. If it doesn't they can be held accountable by the FCC. Granted, there are few today, due to lack of technical knowledge that can do that. It wasn't that long ago however, that finding a ham station completely constructed by the amateur wasn't uncommon or often surplus military gear would be modified for use on the amateur bands. With the plug-and-talk equipment of today, easier test with given answers that can be memorized, the technical expertise of the amateur is sadly lacking

In the US any ham or anyone else can legally listen in on cb frequencies.

> to get a CB licence?

Since there is no requirement here for a cb license I don't suppose any amateur would bother.

> Are the radios actually legal to use on the CB bands??

Only radios that are type accepted for cb use are legal to use on the cb bands. There is a problem here with imported radios that have 'expanded' channels that will also operate on the 10 meter ham band. These radios are not 'type certified' for cb use and they are purchased by unlicensed persons and are often used on the 10 meter band. Some time back it was a popular thing for amateurs to take cb radios and convert them for use on the 10 meter band, just change the crystals, peak up the circuits and you had a nice little mobile 10 meter radio. Once modified as such the radios were no longer type certified nor legal for cb use but perfectly legal for amateur use.

True, but there is a much larger percentage of illegal operation on the cb band than on the amateur bands, at least here in the US. And we have the 'freebanders' who for some strange reason think they have the right to operate on the frequencies between the upper end of the cb band and the lower end of 10 meters plus just about anywhere else they chose.

I must confess I haven't acquainted myself with M3's. Is this a test free amateur license?

If it doesn't pry off easily, you might want to try roughing up the smooth knob with some large-grit sandpaper to give you a better grip,

Ive seen a few of the ex military gear on my frequent walks around the radio rally meetings held in the UK at various times of the year. Ive even seen small tanks for sale :o)

Indeed. But what i was getting at was Amateur radios that can access the CB bands not CB's themselves. I know in the UK if an amateur wants to converse on the 27MHz CB band he needs a CB licence.. his Amateur licence doesnt cover him/her for it. (or whether thats just M3 im not sure) Im sure someone will let us know.

In the UK its a simple test (which only an idiot would fail) to get people started on the Amateur bands. I think the main frequencies being 2m. Im not sure where else they can go but its limited compaired to a full amateur and the powers less. Most UK Amateurs are horrified that their airspace is being invaded by these "CB type lowlife" (their words not mine) which suprises me as i firmly believe anyone gaining their M3 licence would go on to Intermediate... etc not stop there so i cant see why the "old hams" arent encoraging them rather than belittling them.

After checking to see theres no fixing grub screws try biting it and pulling it off with your teeth, that shouldnt mark the knob... careful you dont swallow it though..... (ooh err matron ;o)
If your not bothered about the original knob pull it off with a pair of pliers.....

it's laying flat side from corner to corner, in my garage. i just disconnected it yesterday in hopes of getting a dipole, when i'm officially told i cannot erect the antenna in my patio area.

Well gee, Dudly, how would you know? Since you are so knowlegable about such things, what page in the SRB holds the transcript of an Article 15 hearing? And for that fact, what page is used to record crimes and punishments?

Yes they do. I seem to recall having said the very same thing several posts ago.

They haven't been a problem so far. My security clearance has never been revoked. I had a job cleaning a bank while working my way through college. I also had a contract a few years ago to design and build a custom security system. I even have a concealed weapons permit. And I have no plans to start a new career in law enforcement. So I guess the only problem is the one you created in your imagination, Dudly.

well, i've been sitting on the fence with the dipole lately, as i've spent about $1,500 in the past two months. i know it doesn't cost much to build one or even buy one for that matter. i will get over it

Yes, one would think so. That is what our Novice license was for, an entry type of license, nothing real hard on the test, only 5wpm for code, limited power and not all frequency privileges.

> so i cant see why the "old hams" arent > encoraging them rather than belittling them.

It seems that is often the position taken not by just 'old hams' today, but by some of those who do upgrade. Kinda like how as a freshman in high-school you were looked down on by upper-classmen. It didn't use to be that way. When I had my Novice ticket, I probably worked more General and higher class licensees on the Novice bands because they would come to the Novice frequencies and work us, sending code slowly and carefully to encourage us to get proficient enough to upgrade. Amateur radio used to be very gentlemanly, still is for the most part but seems amateur radio has begun to reflect much of today's rude society.

Damage control?

You're the one with things to "patch up", Frankie.

I snipped the rest in favor of a few notes. Anyone caring to re-read your lies can hit the browser back-button.

The first is that everyone ELSE here, with the possible excepttion of Brain, Markie and Lennie, has to wonder what your ulterior motive is here. Since you "arrived" only 2 months ago or so, your sole "mission" has been to TRY and undermine my military service.

So far, it's just been lame accusations not substantiated by a single word of fact.

I on the otherhand have given you more than enough information to verify my service based upon YOUR claims of "who" you know and "what"

you know.

Obviously THOSE claims were lies and wanton deceit too.

As a matter of fact, when you first "arrived" in RRAP, you were yelling "FRAUD! FRAUD!"...The problem was you were citing nothing but LENNIE'S posts, and old ones at that. It was only after several other folks, myself included, pointed out you had your attributions wrong that you redirected your comments to me.

Secondly is that you are a disgraced, twice court martialed, dishonorably discharged service member. Had you invested a TENTH of the energy into being the Marine you SHOULD have been then, the courts martials wouldn't have been necessary. Instead you're relagated into tossing mistruthful allegations at those who DID serve Honorably in order to salve your conscience.

Thirdly is your COMPLETE lack of even the remotest amateur radio relevent content in ANY thread. Not that you'd have any as, just like Lennie Anderson, you're all spite and bile...Any radio "operating" experience you may have has NOTHING to do with Amateur Radio.

So...For those who care to do so, back-button to Frankie's rants and raves and enjoy...they are just what I said they are...lies and wanton deceit from a guy who finds it easy to be a liar...

Frank Gilliland...Disgraced coward and liar.

Period.

Steve, K4YZ

Where did you serve? What did you do while you were there? What of your claims of "Seven Hostile Actions?"

That's what we're trying to find out. But you just won't cooperate because you fear something, probably the truth.

I guess that's where in NC you live. Here in Chatham County,NC there is A bunch of truckers on Ch19. Ch35 used to be always full of people, but its died down some as most have moved on or away. but I still get people on 35,19, 11, 16, and 28 out my way, lots of base stations chatting it up at night, and a bunch of mobiles in and out in the day.

If you want the knob off and don't care if it is damaged the safest way to remove it without damaging the shaft is to:

Drill and tap the end of the knob and push the knob off with an added bolt.

Anyone caring to re-read the contradictions you have made about your military "career" can search google.

You need to read the archives again, Dudly, because the facts don't agree with your statement.

>single word of fact.

And your claims about your military "career" differ..... how?

> I on the otherhand have given you more than enough information to

>you know.

You seem to be under the mistaken impression that I have some resources available to me that aren't available to anyone else.

> Obviously THOSE claims were lies and wanton deceit too.

Nope. It's called "public records". Haven't you ever heard of credit reports? birth, death and marriage certificates? press releases? property and business tax records? bankruptcy filings? criminal and civil case records? Heck, I'll bet that your high-school yearbook picture is online. Just because these things don't come up on a google search doesn't mean they are hidden..... you just have to know how and where to look.

Again, you need to re-read the archives.

I'm an honorably discharged Beirut vet, a member of my local VFW, a graduate of EWU with a major in electronics engineering (specialized degree) and a minor in communications, and a respected and productive member of my community. I was also a BE until ClearChannel of Borg assimilated the station, but that's another ball of wax.

There's nothing wrong with my conscience, Dudly. And my "allegations" are quite factual, as you already know. Now if -YOU- had invested a tenth of the time providing proof of your "career" instead of spinning the facts and crossposting this discussion to rrcb, your last two months of defensive posturing "wouldn't have been necessary".

> Thirdly is your COMPLETE lack of even the remotest amateur radio

You mean I should stay on the topic of amateur radio policy? Should I consider your posting history as a model of on-topic discussion?

> Not that you'd have any as, just like >Lennie Anderson, you're all spite and bile...Any radio "operating"

Really? Not even when I was operating my Uncle's station when I was a kid? Or making QSLs with hams while I was on field ops? I really doubt if you knew this, but we had this really cool rig, the MRC-110 I think it was. Covered 2-30MHz using an old push-button portable (PRC-104) for an exicter, a 1kW linear with a matching auto-tuner, and a huge screw-together whip -- all packed onto a jeep. Some of us would actually volunteer for radio watch when that beast was deployed.....

Is that "on-topic" enough for you?

> So...For those who care to do so, back-button to Frankie's rants

Assuming anybody is reading this who actually cares, I couldn't agree more: browse the archives and see how Dudly is spinning the facts.

Wow! Such finality! It's almost like you are the definitive expert on cowardice and dishonesty!

Ah come on guys -- CB and Amateur Radio are both viable services for disasters

As well as any other radio service - FRS, MURS, GMRS as well as cell phones and regular phones (if they work)

Question for you -- over the years, which service do you think handled more local emergencies CB or Ham Radio

Lots more CB radios out there I spect

Yeah I know all about the range of these radios
But even with FRS good for a mile or two -- all it takes is someone to hear you.

Ham repeaters typically have battery backup. During the Cedar fires in San Diego, we had the batteries go out after a day or so -- so Mountain Mike went to the repeater -- hooked up an gas alternator and refilled it periodically.
Bottom line -- the repeater was up and fully operational for the entire period of the fires

Listen to 52 simplex in most any large U.S. city, especially Los Angeles, NYC, Atlanta, etc. You might just change your mind about what 2 meters is used for in big cities.

Uhhh, reread the post. I am not talking about hams.
In certain large U.S. cities, hams are not the problem on two meters.

True...but the same with CB'ers. Just because theres a few bad ones out there the Ham fraternity have no problem in insulting the majority of good CB users. Theres good and bad in all and this constant bickering between the hobbies is getting tiresome now.
How about concentrating on some Factual radio related threads and everyone getting on ???..... no hope ??? nah i didnt think so....

"the only thing cb is good for is finding hookers, gay diesel dummies and drug dealers."

Well, when I was between 11-17, I met at least a dozen of the people I talked with on the radio. These were people away from channel 19, on a channel for locals. They all seemed "nice" to me.

As a point of fact it has nothing to do with either Twist or Steveo.
Hopefully Twists now knows that somebody figured he would be an easy sucker

Exactly. The same types of people the original poster claimed were using CB, (hookers, pimps, prostitutes, drug dealers, etc.), are in fact using two meters in several large U.S. cities. I travel a lot and have monitored this type of traffic in larger cities.

Not true. i usually only have the Cb in my Truck when I'm towing our Fifth Wheel on trips. There have been many time I wish I had left it in permanently.
The Construction Zone and Wreck backups, Speed Traps, and Dangerous
Drivers are always relayed on the CB.
I don't use it for Conversation with XYZ Freight to break the boredom etc.
The CB has proven very useful.

they do not last long on the air here in Arizona. bootleggers are often caught within 1 week of starting their chatter down here. also, all repeaters are setup with the new digital fingerprint identification system (each radio is unique, even in the same lot manufactured). It doesn't take long before someone slips up.

This was not the case in 1993 (took over 3 years to get a particular bootlegger off the air and there are still bad feeling about it on some of the more "loose canon" networks that spring up here).

Sure I can.

Your DOD record confirms your service from '74 to '92 (yes, that's only 18 years, not 20 years as you claimed when you wrote, "I spent 20 years in the Marine Corps to give people the right to exercise their freedom of choice, and it hurts me to see so many people exercising their choice to be apathetic!"), but it doesn't distinguish between active or reserve. It -does- confirm your MOS as an avionics tech. It -doesn't- indicate that you were in any medical field, in which case you would have been a Navy Corpsman, not a Marine Gunny.

But this conflicts with your 1998 claim that you were a "former 10 year+ EMT", which would make you an EMT -prior- to 1988, more than four years -before- you "retired" from the Corps. Also, in the late '80s, (before moving to Arkansas, home state of your second wife and your state of residence when you allegedly "retired" from the Corps in 1992), you worked in California as an ER tech at "Hoag Memorial Hospital Presbyterian in Newport Beach, CA", which would be virtually impossible if you were also on active duty as an avionics tech.

The ONLY way you could have been educated, trained and gained experience as an EMT while in the Corps is if you were a reservist.

All this information is publically available from what -you- have written on Usenet. Of course, you can always use that "my account was hacked" excuse, but that doesn't explain why you claimed to be in the Air Force Auxilliary, a retired Marine Gunny, and signed your posts with "Semper Paratus" (Coast Guard motto). Nor does it explain your interest in pirate radio, star gazing, or your hunt for ET. Clearly you are one very confused individual, Dudly. And as more than one person has previously noted, you are clearly a paramilitary-wannabe and a hero-wannabe.

There's plenty more information that is publically available about you, but I think I made my case -- using -YOUR OWN WORDS-!!!

BTW, what happened to your first marraige? Were you lying when you took those vows before God?

Wrong. I have your own words and some basic math skills. That's all I need to prove that you are a liar.

So I designed and build some hardware.
This uses a Microchip PIC 12F629 micro controller.
http://panteltje.com/panteltje/cb/lide-0.1.zip
this holds the diagram and the ASM and HEX listings.

See the README for some info abut the ASM code.

Some features:
The circuit draws only 33 uA from 2 AAA batteries...
It runs on a watch xtal (32kHz).
It has enough power to drive a small 3V beeper, now it drives a high brightness LED..

This is the first software.. no special processing, the interrupt caused by lightning just switches the LED on for some seconds.

I think it should perhaps be possible to further reduce standby current by putting the PIC in sleep mode...

Now waiting for the next real lightning to test if sensitivity is sufficient.
See README for how to change that.

Surely that cant just be dropped at the CB'ers door like the hint implies.
Just because some unsavories are using the band incorrectly its instantly CB'ers to blame?. In fairness its illegal Amateurs not CB'ers. When does a CB'er no longer get called a CB'er..... when he goes on the amateur bands instead... hes not a CBer then..... hes as said previous.. an Illegal Amateur ie. Unlicenced Amateur using the amateur bands.
Its like motorcyclists and car drivers.... if a motorcyclist drives a car and has a crash people dont say aaaah its a bad motorcyclist..... they will say oooh what a bad car driver he is..... well, you know what i mean ;o)

You're out of your mind. I have talked with unlicensed people from Arizona for as long as I can remember and some of them are pretty well known. Portapotty Charlie lasted years, the 38lsb gang is always present and raising cane from Phoenix, and,,,oh, never mind. You probably don't believe these guys exist on hammie radio, either.

Right. One buys a used radio at a hamfest (they do still exist, right?) or through a want ad, pays cash, and goes mobile. What the hell are you going to do? You have two choices..listen to it or don't.

Not sure there is such a thing as an 'unlicensed' amateur. If they don't have a license, they aren't an amateur radio operator. The folks illegally using the band are unlicensed illegal users, some of whom likely also operate on the cb band or even other frequencies where they are illegal because of a lack of a license.

Precisely. The people utilizing two meters in several large U.S. cities are neither hams or CBers, and the problem is growing, especially the number of Spanish-language speakers. I am not going to out my company here, but we have a pretty good handle on spectrum management, and illegal activity is on the rise and not just in the 144 mHz range.

Ok lets take the discussion the other way. Is a CBer someone who uses a CB with a licence or is a CBer someone who just uses a CB and doesnt give a damn about a licence? If he has NOT got a licence.. in your style of words... how can he be classed a CB operator??? see my point??
The people screwing around on Amateur frequencies may also mess about on CB but if they arent licenced on CB they arent CB'ers.. they are just abusers... same as if Amateur users arent licenced they arent Amateurs. They are also just abusers..

Graham, If I recall correctly, CBers in the USA are not FCC Licensed.

Amateur Radio operators are FCC Licensed.

Depends, here in the US there is no license requirement to operate a cb, that was dropped some years ago, so anyone who purchases a cb and operates it on the citizens band is a cber. If in your country a license is required to operate on the citizen's band, then it is just like amateur radio, if someone operates without a license then they are just an unlicensed illegal radio operator.

> The people screwing around on Amateur frequencies may also mess about on CB

And that is often the case. Those that choose to operate illegally on the ham bands or other frequencies often start out on cb where disregard for any rules is the norm, purchasing radios that operate outside the cb frequencies where the attitude is "I bought and paid for this here radio and I can operate where I damn well please".

> but if they arent licenced on CB they arent CB'ers.. they are just abusers

Yep, if a license if required for cb.

> ... same as if Amateur users arent licenced they arent Amateurs. They > are also just abusers..
> Regards,

They cannot be 'Amateur users' if they are not licensed, they would just be unlicensed users. One has to be licensed to be an Amateur Radio Operator.

Now if an Amateur operates illegally outside the Amateur bands, is he operating as an Amateur, or just as another illegal user? The FCC can and most likely will revolk the hams Amateur license if caught doing so.
Example, some hams have been caught operating just below 10 meters on the so-called 'freeband' frequencies (there are no 'freeband' frequencies as those frequencies are allocated), and have had their Amateur licenses revolked.

I know that they used to be and I have one (KOH0767) and a ham license (KE4MVU). I'm legal on both. I also have a general radiotelephone operator license.

I didn't mention simplex frequencies there. I specifically directed it toward the repeater usage end of things (sorry if I was unclear).

However, that being said, bootleggers down here do not last long. they are found, ferretted out and outed to the FCC (and DHS as need be).

BTW, on what frequencies and what date/time did you take these 'actions" (talking with bootleggers on band)?

as for the local cb crowd (on their own band), they remain down there and of late (given that I listen on a short wave radio) they haven't been nearly as noisy as in years past. in fact, of late 9last 9 months or so) I haven't heard much from that crowd anywhere in the 11 meter spectrum at all.
kingston has pretty much gone quiet as have most of the other "troublemakers".

btw, that group has pretty much stayed off the 2 meter amateur band (they don't want to go down the same road that Tim Hoffman took). BTW, I do run a small monitoring setup here (as do about 50 other hams in the Phoenix area). Don't like that? oh well. too bad, so sad.

purchase they may, use without a license? they won't last long. in fact, we here in phoenix have less of a problem with bootlegger than elsewhere. We have a strong local organization that manages over 40+ repeater sites all around Arizona and they have a man in place who is very good at handling reports of "malicious interference" from "unlicensed parties". Mobile or stationary doesn't matter. Fact is, these guys do get caught and quite regularly. you may not like it but thats just tough. deal with it.

really? you don't know the equipment I have (or may have). it isn't that hard for me to listen to 15 or 20 frequencies simultaneously using a combination of hand helds and base units. Fact is, you don't know and thats what is driving you nuts on here.

Interesting, gave me some nice idea - lightning coming and leaving - This could be done if acoustical and EM radiation sensitive (count seconds between flash and sound).
Low frequency sound, add electret.. similar to my design for the helicopter finding missile, but now only one electret (helis are easily found by sound, no radar needed), but that is a whole other story).

But 'one of those' NO.
First let's look at my battery consumption: 33 uA (micro ampere).
So, 33 uAh in a couple of AAA 500 mA rechargables gives 500 000 / 33 = 15151 hours of operation, or 1.77 YEARS not 100 hours as that competition.
And that is on rechargebles, and I am not even using sleep mode...
On normal batteries with sleep mode it should outlast the battery storage lifetime several times.

And mine is PROGRAMMABLE, there is NOTHING like this is the currently known UNIVERSE!!! ;-)

You can easily add your own ideas - algos- .
And then there is price, any self respecting amateur electronics bastler these days has a PIC programmer, a PC with MPLAB, or some other soft to program that PIC, the PIC costs 1$, the other parts : junk box,..
So, DIY super cheap super programmable super clever super low power super lightning detector for a super low price.
No [it is a] great project.
Theirs is designed for outdoors???
Mine is especially designed to sit next to you while you sleep to let you know the lightning is coming from MILES AWAY without false alarms to wake you up so you can disconnect your antenna.

No mine is better :-) MUCH better....

Not sure how it works in your country but in the UK, CB users have to be licenced as do Amateurs... I know in the past you used to have to have an FCC licence for CB as i remember the application forms quite clearly being in the Boxes that they used to come in. That was back in the late 70's though.
My original point was that just because some dum dum decides to mess about on the Amateur bands the majority of the Ham fraternity immediately call them CB'ers.. basically as an insult. Ie.. anyone messing about and causing trouble must be a CBer. They arent prepaired to accept its either idiot Hams or their children messing about on their radios, or just someone who bought/nicked a radio and hasnt the brains to use it properly.

The majority of CB users are perfectly well behaved individuals as are most Amateurs but you know yourself in all walks of life there are the sort you could quite happily do without..

Graham,
The licensing requirement for CB radio operators in the USA was dropped back in the 1970's when Jimmy Carter was president, he was responsible for dropping the licensing requirement.

In the UK you Legally require a licence... no test is involved. Its basically just a tax on the airwaves. But if thats the case, you say unlicenced Amateurs arent Amateurs, they are just unlicenced users... likewise anyone operating unlicenced on the CB isnt a CB'er. He, also, is an Unlicenced User... I realise its a little different in the US.

Seems a bit unfair really. The thing that put me off going for my ticket was learning morse. I honestly cant see the point in it nowadays even though i accept it had its uses and can still "get through" when other methods fail but to be honest... as its only a hobby now.. why bother (use the phone) Obviously theres an advantage using it in war of course but technology has progressed.
The thing that put me off M3 was the fact i couldnt legally use 27MHz. That and the fact i would be scoffed at in here probably more than being a CB'er
;o)

Most truckers in the UK arent that friendly. Theres a number of times ive been nearly run off the road in my car because they see the CB antenna and think... aaaah a skateboard user.... Dont know about the 27680 reference but in the UK they hang about the 27.78125MHz slot eating bacon sarnies as they ratchet.....

You actually still have your CB license? I doubt it has any validity any more. OTOH I still remember my CB license # and it would be cool to get an official copy of it...

You're out of your mind. I have talked with unlicensed people from Arizona for as long as I can remember and some of them are pretty well known. Portapotty Charlie lasted years, the 38lsb gang is always present and raising

I hear them regularly when skip is rolling. I'm wondering if you're too far from them to receive. Unless you're within a very short distance to them when they are coming in down here you are not going to be able to hear them when the dx is hopping.

That's cool. There are plenty of them along the border.

Never considered it.

Such is the way with assumptions but I must inform you choosing to assume in such a manner that requires you remain in the dark -is- your inalienable right, but limits your knowledge.

>also, all repeaters are setup with the new

Right. One buys a used radio at a hamfest (they do still exist, right?) or through a want ad, pays cash, and goes mobile. What the hell are you going to do? You have two choices..listen to it or don't.

>purchase they may, use without a license?

>they won't last long.

So another aspect you're not aware regarding your chosen hobby is the sheer number of shared/borrowed calls, including wives of hams ("oh, by the way honey, I forgot to put eggs on the list for the store. Be a dear and pick them up, will you?"). Of course, this behavior has been going on for years and years while the behavior is ignored by fellow hams. See, it's all about the clique you choose to align yourself, isn't it Eric? Some feel it's no big deal, others, like yourself, think it's a huge deal. There are much more productive ways for you to spend your time.

Yea. Well, if you know anything about the FCC, Tampa Bay has who was deemed the Superstar, the second coming, THE ultimate enforcer. His reputation was turned out like a cheap whore by one of the local pirate radio stations. In fact, the more he pushed, the more popular the station became. Oh sure, he ranted and raved to the media and the busts he did make were "gimme's" or "laydowns" of which he enthusiastically confiscated everything right down near to the paint on the walls, but you know what? This place still rocks with pirate stations.

>from "unlicensed parties". Mobile or stationary >doesn't matter.

Please. You can't bust what you can't find.

>regularly.

Maybe in your neck of the woods. Again, since I reside in the most active pirate radio area in the country, Arizona pirate radio and problems might as well be another world. Nice thing about my locale, is I swing the beam and POOF, Arizona is either invisible or under my command.

> you may not like it but thats just tough.

Actually, since you again concern yourself with my personal feelings toward such mentionables, I guess I would have to wholeheartedly approve. Who wants a bunch of amateur (pun not intended) pirate radio operators running around getting caught and making the real pros who have been around for years and years, look bad? Such is why pirate radio often has the rep it does, not because it's simply "illegal" (because so the hell are many hams out there, but, most don't care to the extent you do) but because it has a rep trashed by clowns like you freely admit dwelling in Arizona. Pirate radio is a great thing because it's not bound to the commercial bullshit and by "commercial" I mean canned and sanitized shit no one but FM pop devotees want to hear.

>deal >with it.

I do. I have supported (through attending events like concerts and benefits) pirate AND public radio for over twenty years.

>This was not the case in 1993 (took over 3

It's still not the case there, you just don't know where to look.

>really? you don't know the equipment I have

If you are in denial about what takes place in your own state, it doesn't matter -what- equipment you have. Just becuase you haven't found it doesn't mean it doesn't take place.

Hmmm. Maybe the LED warning signal logic can be applied to a remote antenna switch to provide isolation from the antenna? The the above sensing for near by static discharges, it can hold the antenna isolated from the last discharge plus delta minutes before re-engaging the antenna system for normal usage. Just a thought.

Exceedingly late 70's :o). I remember the banter between him and Maggie Thatcher. She was Prime minister in 79 which is where the confusion sprung from. I was more into girls, CB and music than politics so a lot of that went over my head... thank god.....

More nails in the Dudly coffin are his abject failure to even once NAME a single piece of aviation electronics, either by proper nomenclature or familiar name after all those years of "avionics service." That's unheard of in a field where shop-talk is common. The best that Dudly could do is name some "MARS equipment" (of decades ago) in messages, something which could have been cribbed from one of the many ham websites.

One of the most telling of Dudly's blunders in replies is his failure to note what "Vinson" was (an older standard of electrnic cryptography) when you asked about his "service under 'Colonel' Vinson" at 'Gordon.' :-)

Way early, Dudly tried to cover up this lack of familiarity in both communications and/or aviation electronics military equipment by saying "it was secret and [he] couldn't reveal secrets." The electronics industry trade publications have long published equipment names, contracts, manufacturers, and general information...long before Dudly was allegedly in the USMC. Those publications still do. All public info.

It must be the "New Math" he was taught in the 1960s. :-)

Dudly "hunted for ET?" I missed that one. From the looks of his postings, I think ET found HIM! :-)

BTW, Dudly did change his "signings" to "Semper Fi" later.
[that might have happened after "JAG" started on TV]

>There's plenty more information that is publically available about >you, but I think I made my case -- using -YOUR OWN WORDS-!!!

Dudly isn't bothered by mere "details" like that...:-)

>BTW, what happened to your first marraige? Were you lying when you >took those vows before God?

Very early on Dudly bitched about "paying all that alimony"
[to his first wife] in here. <shrug>

>> He also dodges following up on all of the references I have Dudly is living his own imaginary life in the Internet.

Either that or his rationalizing has it that "some hacker" got his screen names and passwords and is "posing" as him.

>need to prove that you are a liar.

Thousands of postings later and Dudly DENIES ever doing anything wrong. Dudly still has to provide some verifiable references to any of his claims about his "military career."

Dudly WAS once "commissioned" in the Tennessee STATE Guard (NOT affiliated with the National Guard). For a short time his scowling visage was on one of their "brigade" unit photo pages as a "First Lieutenant" and "communications officer." The photo had him in cammies (the northern type, very macho). A Tennessee STATE Guard brigade is the size of an Army company and they hold "meetings" once a month, ostensibly to "refresh" their knowledge of military policing (main task in the state).
The Tennessee State Guard has since revised its web pages.
Dudly's scowling visage is no longer there. [tsk, tsk]

At present, Dudly has a "commission" (?) as a "Captain" in the Tennessee Civil Air Patrol. No photo of him there although the state CAP Commander (a female) has hers on display as well as some others. Dudly's QRZ.COM biography page shows him scowling into the camera while wearing a flight suit...very macho and 'uniformish.' Note: Biographic details such as photos and personal details beyond that supplied by FCC database information is submitted to QRZ by the individuals involved...there is no claim that QRZ people actually check up on such submissions.

Dudly dotes on uniforms, it seems. He never smiles in those photos. [does he need a dentist?]

He once said he was a Purchasing Agent for a medium-sized electronics company and implied he "knew a great deal about electronics engineering" as a result of 'working with' the engineers there. PAs are form-fillers and telephone call makers and catalog page thumbers. Their "engineering knowledge" is quite limited and NOT "on the bench" doing a thing. Dudly knows dink about electronics engineering.
Dudly "worked there" less than a half year according to posts in here, either taking that job or quitting "due to [emotional upset over] the death of his daughter."

We are all required to accept his claims as "true" since the PCTAs all frown on challenging anything of anyone criticizing someone suffering a personal loss. No one else but Dudly can possibly have such traumatic episodes in their life and thus nobody else deserves any slack.

Dudly's excuse is that everyone else is a "liar" so only he "tells the truth" just by mere mention in a post here. Real facts are irrelevant. Arithmetic is irrelevant. Someone is always "hacking his accounts" and "posting as him" if he is challenged. He's nuts.

Yes, but to 'isolate' you need at least a coule of meters in my experience.
A coax relay won't do ...I have seen lightning flash over electrical wiring in a room.

So maybe explosive charges that blow piece of the coax away.... ;-)

Dunno, I just get up, go outside, just above the door is the coupling piece in coax, turn it lose, one end of the coax throw it in the garden, the other end the same the other way.. that is what I do.
Takes 5 minutes.

If lightning then hits the antenna it follows the coax into the ground.

Very well stated, Graham. There used to be a license requirement for CB here in the US, but not anymore. (for a long time now)

I got my first CB license around 1972 or so..my dad had to sign for it. He thought I was nutz! (he still does) Had to search for someone to talk to ground wave back then..

It's not the majority of radio operators that are so quick to throw CBer's under the bus. In fact, many radio operators started with CB. A few high horse blowhards think 11 meters is only good for gutter snipes, (gutter snipes can be entertaining too).

It's a fun band, and invaluable on a highway trip.

He mentions nothing because he basically did nothing. Reservists do very little in their MOS and therefore retain very little regarding the same.

Case in point: the M16-A1 was manufactured by several different companies including General Motors and (are you ready for this?) Mattel. The venerable PRC-77 was the brainchild of the engineers at Motorola..... they must have been on drugs to design a radio with a dual switching IF system.... but hey, it worked. It just cost a whole lot more than a simpler design. And the VINSON crypto system has been documented many times on the net long before I ever mentioned it.

Given: a = b
Multiply both sides by [a]: a^2 = ab
Subract [b^2] from both sides: a^2 - b^2 = ab - b^2
Factor: (a + b)(a - b) = b(a - b)
Divide (a - b) from both sides: (a + b) = b
Since a = b, substitute: (a + a) = a Therefore: 2a = a
Divide both sides by [a]: 2 = 1

His "hero-wannabe" dysfunction isn't limited to the internet.....

He seeks praise as a hero in just about everything he does. He looks for it in the military .....the Marine Corps Reserve, the Air Force Auxilliary, CAP, TN State Guard..... he even made passive assertions that he was a Coast Guard vet. He discovered that the medical field is full of hero recognition so he became an LPN and works in emergency rooms. He got his ham license so he can work RACES. When he discovered the internet he extended his praise-panhandling to the newsgroups and the web, and even started his own yahoo group for hero-nurses.

But that hero-rush doesn't last very long so he seeks the opportunity to be the hero -beyond- the established emergency services. He drives around off-duty with a medical bag, a scanner and emergency lights, hoping to run across someone in distress that he can save. One step further and he'll be -staging- emergency situations just so he can be the hero (assuming he hasn't done so already).

Dudly is a very disturbed individual.

Uhhh....Lennie...What's with you and "facts"...?!?!

The current Tennessee Wing Commander is very much a male.

To the best of my knowledge, there's never been a female Wing Commander in Tennessee Wing. Several other wings are commanded by women.

There are no female Group commanders within Tennessee Wing.

Although there are female squadron commanders, none of them are in Group 2...I am a part of Group 2 staff. And I'm not a Captain, Lennie.
Haven't been for some time.

Yes, Lennie...You ARE a liar.

The above few lines proof of same since you expressed all of the above as "fact" while almost none of it is factual.

You really missed the point, I never made any reference to 'illegal cb frequencis', I said other frequencies (meaning frequencies other than the cb frequencies) they operate on illegally. Try to keep up.

Then you get thrown over the bed of your truck, hit the ground and take off running like hell. It's not till after you smell the burning flesh and notice the blood coming from under you fingernails do you put 2 and 2 together.

At this point you muster the courage to drive to the emergency room, half drunk still, and they hook you to an EKG machine to "monitor" you. It's just a cruel game because they made the wires about 12" too short to make it to the bathroom to take a piss.

Yeah, that was no fun, turned my beard gray too!

Quite true on Vinson. Outdated by now, of course. All of the SINCGARS-compatible radios have a different system that is muy robost. Those started becoming operational in 1989. Right now Harris Corporation is doing their Falcon
III handheld multi-band radio which is SINCGARS compatible.

I got a chance to see the (now rather aged) PRC-104 HF manpack under development at Hughes Ground Division. There's a few areas in that package which aren't what they could be but that little critter works just fine in the field. One of the first to use wideband frequency synthesis of the carrier in military portable environments.

There's a legend on the 'net that Helena Rubenstein (?) got into "making" the venerable R-390 receiver (developed by Collins Radio for the DoD) as a later second-source. They apparently wanted to diversify many years ago. They got one look at the complete set of production plans and said "no way!" To save legal fees, they managed to get the minimum of a 100 built units from elsewhere, made up some nameplates,

"dishonoring" all other vets for joining in on Memorial Day

In reading of the latest suicide-killer William Freund, I learned of the existance Asperger's Syndrome, related to autism and not being able to function well socially.
Maybe Dud has that. Newspaper reports say it is seldom detected in ordinary medical exams by ordinary MDs.

I keep thinking of Elfren Saldivar, dubbed "the Angel of Death" during his trial in Glendale, CA. NURSE Saldivar offed a couple dozen patients, not only in Glendale but in two other hospitals. The Glendale hospital had NOT done any checking of Saldivar's performance at those other hospitals!

I have typed it in google and found a lot of dead links...
It seems to me (been thinking about this) that best way is go digital, one could use normal packet at 1200 Bd, a simple .jpg picture in color of size 352x288 (what many cheap webcams do) gives a VERY good quality did some tests (Linux webcam software is on my site for Creative Webcam II)
http://panteltje.com/panteltje/mcam/and now also for the D-Link ethernet webcam:
http://panteltje.com/panteltje/mcamip/
just found an old test:
12520 Jul 4 18:27 mcam.jpg
12520 bytes for a good quality jpg...
So if you could use ALL bandwidth on packet, then that file would go in 12520(bytes) x 8 (bits per byte) / 1200 (bits per second) = 83 seconds.
In reality packet will take longer, especially if noise or interference is present, then it would re-request transmission endlessly (almost).

One can wonder if in case of multimedia this error correction in the transfer is needed.
For sure locally a few screwed up bits would still give a picture.
On the other hand digital is extremely sensitive to bit errors.
Different modulation schemes such as used for satellite transmission, and transport stream format (all small 188 byte packets) would perhaps be an improvement.

For now the current packet digital network allows transmission of jpg from webcams.....

Just some thoughts.

I doubt that President Carter had much to do with dropping (dumbing down) licensing requirements. In fact it is unlikely Carter even knew what ham radio was unless they could help him with 'killer rabbits'!

He may have been pres at the time but the FCC has a history of operating on their own.

Yep, I learned that even though the storm is "gone" you can still get your ass handed to you!

In retrospect, I made it out fine, messed with my short term memory for a while but I worked around it. Makes a great "hold my beer and listen to this" story :) The damn dog was out there with me and now I have a Rottweiler herding me inside at the faintest sound of thunder or a group of Harleys driving by on the highway. AND to add insult to injury I had a truck load of rental audio equipment that I had to fix since I was the local pro audio repair guy!

Indeed, when Georgie boy said lets go guys we were there with you... getting friendly fired at.... lol. The thing is not being American i wouldnt really follow your presidents with as much interest as you guys which is fair enough as you wouldnt follow the prime ministers of the UK with any real interest.

There was an interesting piece in the paper today about Americans being the most un-observant country of all to do with happenings outside the US because there was a survey to ask people in different Malls who a certain picture was of. It was Camilla Parker Bowles but hardly anyone knew her... which doesnt suprise me as who would be interested in her???? now if you were to say Diana Spencer most people would know.

I knew Regan was President in the 80's but i didnt know when he came to power. As it didnt really affect me i never took much interest.

This is how the fight for Legal CB in the UK went. It want until nearing the end that Margaret Thatcher told William Whitelaw to do something about it as it was becoming a bit of a hot potatoe. With all the things going on around the world and in the UK i doubt if CB was even an issue in her mind.

Its alive in any country where different religious groups are forced to live together be it whoever they are. There are groups that align themselves with the KKK but they dont go round dressed in white with hoods though :o) you would get locked up for that....

Betty Ford sent out "breakers" from the White House during the 1970s under the CB handle "First Mama".
Former President Jimmy Carter's wife Rosalynn wanted to talk on CB radio in the later half of the 1970's but she didn't have a CB radio license.
President Carter quickly got the FCC to change the law so that anyone could instantly use as their CB callsign - K , their first and last initials and their zipcode. Shortly thereafter the CB licensing requirement was dropped altogether in the U.S.
CB frequencies and any other nearby frequencies quickly proceeded to go to hell in a handbasket.

Care to comment on the conduct and character of ham radio operators on 75 meters, after 10 pm ????????????
And while your are at it, fill us in on approximately how many turf wars, on the average, are currently raging on 75 meters?
And dont wimp out and tell us this happens only occasionally, cause we know better.

Get real. Anyone can google n8wwm or kc8ldo in this group and read to their heart's content the flames and personal garbage these two amateur radio operators initiated against posters in here simply because they disagreed. Over time, we have come to find out the two of them are very much alike in regards to police records and breaking the law with some very serious charges accumulated by both, but that didn't stop either of them from being extreme hypocrites by calling others criminals for their cb use. Compared to these two amateur's crimes, the most blatant and illegal use of cb has nothing on what these two have been charged with over the years. And guess what? Their illegal behavior continues, permitting this group front row seats to two of the most fascist, unhealthy, and hypocritical amateurs known to usenet.

of that you are incorrect. I do not have a problem with the service itself, just a few choice operators within said service (who, by association, give the service a bad name).

Someone else in here suggested that 11 meters is a "sewer pit" and they are right. most of the good folks have either signed off the air entirely or (as I did) upgraded to better options (ham ticket, et al).

There are, however, some who choose to exercise their power to talk outside of regulations (operating on frequencies they have no license for, interference with vital communications, etc.). I don't think you want to get into that can of worms, do you?

This .sig file will continue until Mister Fort posts a sincere apology to all cancer victims and their families. His refusal to do so says more about his attitude and upbringing than any of his thoughtless and hurtful postings in rec.radio.shortwave. He seems to be very proud of the fact that he can buy expensive radios using the refunded deposit money from his empty beer containers and has frequently posted the fact.

It appears he is well on his way to purchasing his next radio. Anyone caring about his well-being should mention the good work of Alcoholics Anonymous to him. They may be able to help him restore his self respect and dignity so he stops posting this drunken garbage on the internet.

A church packed with 4,000 mourners celebrated the life of Rosa Parks

She sparked the civil rights movement 50 years ago by refusing to give her bus seat to a white man; to Washington, where she became the first woman to lie in honor in the Capitol Rotunda.

At 5 a.m. Wednesday, a military honor guard carefully carried Parks' casket from the museum into a waiting hearse.

I think they should have put her in the back of a bus to carry her off in Detroit.

Get real. Anyone can google n8wwm or kc8ldo in this group and read to their heart's content the flames and personal garbage these two amateur radio operators initiated against posters in here simply because they disagreed. Over time, we have come to find out the two of them are very much alike in regards to police records and breaking the law with some very serious charges accumulated by both, but that didn't stop either of them from being extreme hypocrites by calling others criminals for their cb use. Compared to these two amateur's crimes, the most blatant and illegal use of cb has nothing on what these two have been charged with over the years. And guess what? Their illegal behavior continues, permitting this group front row seats to two of the most fascist, unhealthy, and hypocritical amateurs known to usenet.

All are public record. You're just too stupid to put two and two together. The fantastic part is, you've been ead around by your dirty nose in this group for years and are none the wiser.

Yes, it's been a long time since N8WWM had the balls to post under his call, but that's what happens when one commits multiple crimes while acting the hypocrite. You just happen to be the latest to have your clock cleaned by your own hand. BTW, you left one hell of a trail with your cyber activity. See above,,,,,"stupid".
Up next..your AOL account yanked. After that, you're probably going to go to jail because of your criminal activity you just can't get a grip

Sure,,,again,,,you claimed you haven't been on 11 meter in over ten years. Then you turn around and claim you monitor it via shortwave. Well, gee Eric, if you weren't on eleven meter, you damn sure weren't monitoring it and damn sure have no way in the world of knowing what is or isn't taking place there. Again, try to be more clear in conveying just what you mean. It's good communications to do so but not good communications to contradict yourself.

You're in denial, Eric One doesn't proceed to tell another radio op about his monitoring for whatever the eck it is you monitor, then assume another dislikes your activity, based on nothing but more assumptions you conjured, which is exactly what you did.

>I do not have a problem with the service itself,

Has a nice ring to it, but your assuming such monitoring activity would be disliked by myself contradict your above words.

Again, you know this from your esp, someone told you this and you feel the need to repeat it, or was this more magic you worked, monitoring the 11 meter band while shortwaving, but not really being -on- the 11 meter band. Neat trick.

> most of the good folks have either signed off

Wrong. there are plenty of good folks left on that radio. The hurricane disaster relief proved it, and the mere existence of REACT working with the Red Cross confirms it, not your biased disdain.

>or (as I did) upgraded to better options (ham

Such a statement is highly subjective, as it relies on the premise you are one of the "good folks". You playing games and making such false assumptions of others based on your own biases and assumptions would give many level headed folks reason to believe otherwise. As always, I'm willing to give the benefit of the doubt to you. Once.

Moving on,,,your statement above also makes the assumption ham radio is a "better" option than cb. Such would depend on one's preferred use, thereby nullifying your claim right off the bat. It also assumes once a ticket is obtained, cb use ceases by that person. Not all are of the clique and elitism bullshit that responsible for such myopic thinking.

>There are, however, some who choose to Lump them all in to one group, why don't you. Just make sure you apply the same biased logic to your preferred, as well, otherwise, you end up looking like KC8LDO and N8WWM..the hypocrite amateurs of usenet.

> I don't think you want to get into that can of

You opened it, trouble is, you're having difficulty closing it and getting them back inside. You can't pigeonhole together everyone you disagree with, Eric. You're really shining, Eric. You're one of a small list of short bus riders who think themselves important enough that I would concern myself with them to such a point of violating any terms of service. I've had one constant provider all these years (you can not say the same) and I'm not going anywhere soon. To borrow liberally from your favorite phrase...."Don't like it? Too bad!" Now get going, you have some sleuthing and apologizing to do.....unless, of course, my benefit of doubt was incorrect.

You see, Len has had a lifelong interest in radio. But in rrap, if you've had a lifelong interest in radio and don't have a ham license, it gets these guys all upset.

Not to worry. That sound you hear is the Bush brand of conservatism

Support our troops, bring them home alive now instead of in a box later.

Where would you like to start? Manufactured intel crafted around policy, direct lies to the public, smear campaigns consisting of libel and slander to all detractors and those who criticize the administration...over 101 BLATANT and outright lies to his own military.....If you need dates and quotes, it can be provided.

You mean like reminding Bush of his lies like restoring honor and integrity to the WH, and doing what is right and not merely what is just legal? You mean like his promise of firing ANYONE in his admin who was "involved" in the Plame case, then renigueing and changing his words when it was found out his admin was not only involved but responsible for the entire case? And those are only the most recent.

Are you really so out of it, man, that you blame the democrats after 5 years of republican control? The country is in deep shit, the repubs did it all, and Bush sheople (although their numbers are shrinking) still blame demos. Now THAT'S what I refer to as "out if it".

> In fact almost all are easily debunked.

The Bush admin is unraveling day by day as the demos sit back and allow it to happen.
Anyways, Fitzgerals has a grasp of that loose thread and he isn't letting go. That old tired process of the admin attacking all their detractors and all who criticize is no longer being permitted by Fitz!

Yep, dont disagree with you for a minute. I did say "which doesnt suprise me Wrong. As a BE I have designed, constructed and operated two broadcast transmitters. Anyone can build and operate equipment for any purpose provided the equipment meets government criteria and has been certificated (or otherwise authorized), and the operator has the proper license or authorization.

And under those rules, Part 15 (as well as the UK equivalent) gives hobbyists the opportunity to build and operate their own equipment
-without- a license at much lower power. That's not necessarily a bad thing; those who have challenged the limitations of the 1750m band have made significant technical advancements that have spilled over into the field of Amateur radio. Part 15 also allows broadcasting with very low power; broadcasting is prohibited for Amateurs except in very special circumstances.

> Manufacturers
>are not licensed to operate their gear.

Wrong. They -MUST- hold a license or proper authorization to operate their equipment for the simple reason that it must be tested.

> Radio Hams

Radio Amateurs.....

>are qualified to design, build and then >operate their own pieces of equipment.

Wrong. An Amateur license does not QUALIFY them to design or build anything. ANYONE can design and build their own equipment. Amateurs are AUTHORIZED to OPERATE their own equipment, and then ONLY if the equipment meets certain technical standards as set forth under the rules regulating Amateur radio.

Notwithstanding the negative connotations, you described CB radio very well. The Citizen's Band is -intended- for people who want to buy their radios off the shelf -- not caring about how they work or any other technical aspects beyond basic functionality. It's a plug-n-play radio service. And no license is required (in the US).

Plus, we MUST be "accurate!" [don't forget that]

In the spirit of sustaining "accuracy," I have NOT had a "LIFELONG interest in radio." I had a moderate interest in it (all of electronics really) until my Army assignment posted me to a major Army radio communications facility in early February 1953. I was then 20, rather out of "teen-age" years. Bingo, BIG TIME INTEREST from then on! So big I was on the road to changing my career goals when I got out of the Army in 1956. See:

http://kauko.hallikainen.org/history/equipment/stations/
My3Years.pdf

Made a "big mistake" (according to a mighty macho motivated morseman in here) in getting a professional radio license in '56, not an amateur one. Tsk, tsk.
Worse yet, I got a JOB in radio that year to do REAL WORK with that license! [horrors, how un-ham-like!]

Never used morse code, never had to in the Army. Never used morse code, or had to, in my career since...which included "working" a station ON the moon. [real DX]

[ ] In the UK, no repeat no licence of any kind is necessary to specify, design, construct, modify, repair, own, or (under some circumstances) test an Amateur transmitter.

[ ] A pass in a current examination for a UK Amateur Licence qualifies the successful candidate for the issue of a UK Licence. Holders of the appropriate levels of licence are permitted to operate transmitting equipment that is not subject to a formal approvals procedure, and to carry out technical investigations. A qualification for a Licence, or the Licence itself, is not, repeat not, a qualification to specify, design, construct, modify, repair, or own transmitting equipment.

This was a early model of the DAK X, there were at least three models that I aware of. Output regardless of tube configuration was not more than say your average D201A of the era. I nearly bought one when the first came out but choose a FT-101EE instead.

I am sure that, like me, many of the genuine users of this group, those with a real interest in the topic, have had more than enough of the whining from some "old school" amateurs.

The question is, do they have a point? Is there really a big flooding of the band with unqualified "amateurs" and are they speking for the majority?
Decide the answers to the questions for yourself, using the figures from an official survey:

Are young idiots taking over the band?
74% of Amateurs are over 45 years.
93% of Amateurs are male, 7% female.

Are people going for the easiest option?
84% hold full/advanced licences,
11% foundation,
5% intermediate.

Are ex-CBers going for the easy option?
30% of foundation licence holders are under 21 (although more may have got theirs while under 21). As the CB craze ended some time back, most CBers will be well over 21... as are most Amateurs.
70% of 21 - 44 year old Amateurs hold full/advanced licences.
88% of 45 - 64 year old Amateurs hold full/advanced licences.
It should be noted that many of those with lower licences may be new to the hobby and working their way up.

With the relaxed exams, are people flooding onto the band?
46% have had licence over 20 years,
24% 10 - 20 years.
9% 6 - 10 years

Do Amateurs think that the licensing is too relaxed?
Too relaxed: 9%
About right: 66%
Too tight: 4%

Lifetime licence?
45% were in favour.
26% yearly.
26% increase length - mainly wanting 5 year licences.

The full report can be downloaded from the Ofcom or Mori Website...
Ofcom: http://www.ofcom.org.uk/
http://www.ofcom.org.uk/radiocomms/ifi/licensing/classes/amateur/morireport/
MORI: http://www.mori.co.uk/

Are there any similar, official or accepted Amateur or CB surveys from other countries?

Regards,

Peter.

You just want to hope that nobody starts to radicalise the Jovos, convincing them that the World is against them. There must be a Kingdom hall near you, there's even one in this small town.

Cannot happen to other religions, huh?
Remember how the Seventh Day Adventists recommended people from this country to go and study with a guy in Waco... and what they became part of?

All it takes is one wacko to get trusted within a religion and he can have an army to carry out his battles for him. People are too keen to just take the words of someone within their religion rather than study the religion properly to find the facts.

The problem is that there are a veciferous small number of foundation licence holders who told us they would habng off until a new licence was introduced, then they would get licenced and run big linears and/or use it as a cover for thier illegal activities on 27, 6.5 or 3.4 MHz.
This is exactly what has happened.
They use CB language on the air and refuse to comply with their licence conditions because there is noone to enforce them now that the RIS has been scaled down.

Part of the reason is that some clubs have been handing out licence passes to people who did not even meet the qualification requirments.
There seems to be a pattern of certain sorts of people passing more regularly with certain clubs.

None of this will be seen from the statistics.

To make matters worse a lifetime or five year licence will stop the falling away in numbers which used to happen with those less keen not keeping up their licences. They will now be able to have a year or two of and come back on without having to make any effort to get their licence back.

Its not a case of old school vs new school.
The people I am talking about are "having a laugh" deliberately at the expense of those CBers who got their licences in the 80's and left CB to get away from the same people!

RESTRUCTURING: UK POLL SHOWS HAMS OPPOSE LICENSING FOR LIFE

British hams have told U-K Radio Regulator Ofcom that they do not want lifetime licenses. This in a poll commissioned by the regulatory agency. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, is in Nottingham in the U-K, with more:

--

The majority of radio amateurs want to keep the existing amateur radio licensing regime or change to a longer license renewal period rather than switch to a license for life, according to an Ofcom commissioned MORI poll into the future of amateur radio in the UK.

The survey of 1,572 amateurs also revealed that two-thirds of amateur radio licensees believe that the current licensing arrangement is "about right".

Ofcom is keen to issue amateur radio licenses for life. But 52% of respondents to the MORI survey said they prefer either the existing arrangement or an extended renewal period.

Among members of the RSGB, the life-time license is even less popular, with around two-thirds favoring the current arrangement or a longer renewal period. Only a third preferred a life-time license. Interestingly, support for the lifetime license was less among frequent radio users than among those who use their radios irregularly.

Of those who wanted a longer renewal period, 60% preferred a five year renewal period, 23% a three year renewal period and only 10% a ten years or more renewal period. The survey also showed that only a tiny minority (1%) wanted to abolish the licensing arrangement altogether, radio amateurs generally believing that the licensing system was vital in maintaining standards of on-air operation. Less than 1% wanted to replace the current Foundation, Intermediate and Advanced licenses with something else.

Radio amateurs were generally also not keen on Ofcom's plans for web-based electronic licenses, with only two in five giving their support to this idea in spite of Ofcom offering to provide a license postal service for those who don't have access to the Internet.

I'm G4NJH, in Nottinhgam.

The results of the poll do not appear to be in any way binding on Ofcom which previously stated that it wants to issue ham radio licenses for life. (GB2RS)

12 volts of REGULATED DC. Do not attached to 120 volt AC unless you like sparks and smoke. Radio Shack sells a 3 amp power supply that is sufficient to run a stock AM only radio. If you intend to upgrade to a sideband model, get 5 or more amps.

You also need an antenna. The higher and bigger the better.
Back of set antennas and loaded mobile antennas won't do it.

Its as they say Pete... religion is the cause of more haterd and death than anything else (including ethnic cleansing in the name of religion being one of the worst). Thats every religion including my own (c of e, even though i dont practice it as a way of life... but i do try to stick to the 10 commandments) but more so the Muslims and middle east based religions who feel some other races should just be irradicated and thats it.... perfectly legitimately in their eyes spouting religious reasons.(yes i know, including Hitler)
As for the Jehovas it was them in the olden days who used to walk around with the sandwich boards stating "the end of the world is neigh"... If you can persuede someone to walk around like that they would have to be seriously gulliable and not the full ticket so your not wrong :o) As far as Jehovas witnesses go, they would never believe the word of an outsider against a member of their own group... which i have seen myself ... even if the word could be disproved easily... but its not that type of people who suicide bomb and take out completely innocent human beings in the name of God (in whatever guise)... (apart from Hitler, shame he never suicide bombed himself earlier on though)..... and as far as the 17 virgins go..... ha haa hahaahahahha. Sorry if the laugh caused anyone any offence there but you have to laugh sometimes....

I posted a reply to that in rec.radio.cb due to their postings about the trouble in New Orleans to let them know they are not alone and got branded a rascist by some screaming leftie wrist wringing liberal. I also posted the Lozells rioting in Birmingham and got the same... i dunno... iz it cos i aint blick???

Its the more serious nutjobs that tend to get publicity in America though mainly through the ease in which they get wepons. In the UK the rioting can be bad but it normally doesnt lead to more than a couple of deaths.... not that thats anything to be proud about but now the muslim fanatics are active here anything can happen.

some interesting points Peter to the question of are the bands being flooded with unqualified amateurs
I think it depends on what you class as qualified, if you say qualified to use a two-way radio then the answer has to be yes as a foundation licence holder has had more training than say a taxi driver who is also a two-way radio user
but are they qualified to experiment with home constructed equipment then the answer would have to be no as the foundation licence holder to me they have not demonstrated the level of technical knowledge required.
which is what the foundation licence is all about it is suppose to be a stepping stone to a higher level.

I have nothing against amateurs that just like to talk to people and never get involved in the technical side of the hobby each to there own but to me a true radio amateur is one that constructs and experiments with radio.

as for the language the new amateur uses, well the way people speak around the country and through time has change and much as the old time amateurs do not like it we don't all speak with a plum in out mouths and never will so as long as anyone can communicate over the air without all the Anglo Saxon expletives then that's ok to me.

Just a sec you silly old fart. I made a joke out of the miss-pronunciation of Hospice "horse piss" it was nothing to do with Hospices in any way shape or form or the people in them, just the name..... as for you knowing i was sick you have no idea who i am, you know nothing about me. However you are showing us what sort of person you are, by using foul language in an open forum and making assumptions into meanings of posts that arent there.

I would guess you have lost someone who was being looked after in a Hospice and you want to lash out at someone... and you think im that person... in which case i wont take your un-warrented scathings as personal.
If you havnt lost someone who was in a Hospice and your the sort of person who takes offence at anything because you cant help yourself, putting your own miserable little twist on words, then i have no time for you and couldnt care less if you find me offensive or not.

I find people with no sense of humour dont have much of a life and dont have many friends.... try getting one. You might enjoy it....

The other thing to do if you dont have chance to get one straight away is to put a spare car battery into a box and take that in the house to run the CB off. Just make certain you put the red to the positive and black to the negative terminal and you should be ok.(make sure the red is fused with a suitable fuse in it, around a 2a would be ok) Use a car charger to top up the battery perferably when you are off air.
You could also get a cheap Power Supply off eBay..... make sure though you buy from someone reputable with a good feedback base or you might end up with a non working one. Even with the postage charge you will probably find it cheaper than a shop and it would be delivered to your door, but if you have the option, buy new from a shop. The rig you refer to i take isnt a sidebander so a 3A to 5A surge PSU supply would run it fine although a 5A to 8A or higher would probably be useful if you plan to run accessories off it too, like an echo box or the like.

Ok I picked up my Cobra GTL 148. It works fine I guess, but Joe didn't repair the meter that used to swing back and forth showing signal strength.

Joe Lorberg says that isn't really important.

I did talk to a few people locally.

I'm using a magnetic Radio shack antenna. I noticed on their site it is not rated more than a "1" out of "5"

I'm thinking about buying the 24.95 one on their site that is rated "5" stars in an hour or so.

I rarely drive faster than 70 MPH so I need one that will hold on up to 90 at most.

What would you all consider to be the best magnetic mounted CB antenna under $100.00?

You are right. When I started in cb back in the early 60s, we had to use call letters just like ham. I have been a ham for a long time now. I will have to post the history of how the stupid nic names started back in the early 70s sometime when I feel like typing.

If you got into cb back in 1966, you only had 5 or 6 channels that you could talk on unit to unit. The other channels were made for talking to people that was on your same licence. They were used for mobile to mobile, well we decided to talk on those channels without using call letters, so everyone thought they could get around the fcc by just making up a stupid nick name and get by. That is kind of how the handle thing started. I grew up in Macon, Georgia and went by Pork chop for years. I am a blind person that has been into cb for years, and finally got my ham ticket about 15 years ago.

Nope, none. Not even morris code, not morris the cat, not even with threats of the whouff-hong and the rettysnitch.

Wonder if Dudly the Imposter has logged onto Setiathome yet? TRUE radio astronomy going on there. Seti has already found dozens of repetitive signal sources all over the sky, have that available at http://setiathome.berkeley.edu.
Right now I'm on my 422nd data unit, running it in the background. Each one takes about 11 hours on a 2 GHz clock computer for the "classic" (older) version of supplied software. Each data unit represents only 104 seconds of time at any particular point in the sky. I'm also running Seti in the background using BOINC, the Berkeley Open Infrastructure software (also free) and am on the 2nd data unit with that.

With the classic version, participants can get a nice little certificate (suitable for framing) after completing 100, 250, or 1000 hours of CPU time. Just the ticket for self-propelled self-defined expert braggarts to show their "expertise" in radio astronomy. :-)

In a way, I'm glad Jimmie isn't involved in Seti. If an ET was ever found, Jimmie would try to argue his case for morse code with them, piss off ET, and Earth would likely face Annihilation! :-)

Go get a Wilson 1000 or a K-40 if you must use a magnet mount.
A body grounded full size antenna will always work better.

heh. similar story to mine. acquired my ham call in 1992. after 3 years of jockeying between the 2 services, I hung up the cb mic.

had a lot of friends who upgraded to ham before I did. guess it was the incentive to get me to finally move up to a better quality service.

as for the "handle" thing, there are many theories as to why it got started and in each one there exists a certain grain of truth to it.

meanwhile, back to radio's......

The situation in France is absolutely crazy... there is absolutely no need for it. They do it because they think (and often do) that they can get away with it. Poor Black /Muslim people facing poverty and live in squalor and so on... never mind the fact they created their own squalor in the first place.
Why the hell dont they just get on with life as most other cultures try to.
Why is it any excuse to get out there and riot... even little kids were out there setting fire to cars.. where the hell are these kids parents....
(probably tourching the cars in the next street)
But... anyone drawing attention to the fact that the majority of the poor black/muslim race in ANY country are hellbent on riots at the drop of the hat and acting like animals will be instantly branded as rascist whether their points are FACT or not.... liberal limp wristed liberals will be the cause of many many more riots in the future as they accuse all the black/muslim peoples problems on rascism rather than the point that many are lazy scumbags who expect the world to owe them a living... and do nothing for themselves to lift thereselves and their familys out of the gutter.... which is where they put themselves as a group in the first place.... as someone in here once said, TBB.... its proven time after time....

What is up with all the hams crossposting? BTW, I purchased a Hustler 5-BTV and will be on 80 meters soon.

That is essentially true also for the US. The amateur license is ONLY needed for "on-the-air" operation of a transmitter.
In contrast, anyone can construct and operate a reciever.

I think that can be generally said as true also for the US.

Well,

I went to the truck stop and purchased a 5' Firestik. I it worked great on the interstate the five miles from the truck stop to my house. Then it fell off the top of my car a couple of times as I was driving. We did have high winds around 30 to 40 mph last night as the thunderstorms approached.

After I put the antenna on the trunk, the radio refused to light up any more after it lit up for a few seconds.

Well, I walked outside just now and looked at the box the magnet came in. It said it was good for antennas up to 48".

So that is probably my problem. I need to take it back and get one large enough to hold a 5' long antenna, or get a 4' antenna.

I was able to talk to a trucker who was 4.5 miles up the road from me so it must have been putting out well.

Then the radio just died. Maybe the antenna was to much for that 25 year old Cobra 148 GTL?

missed by this chap. It makes one wonder if he has a full grasp of his Licence conditions

The other thing to be aware of is that this chap, in this sock-puppet and his innumerable previous ones, has alternately decried e.g contest operating as being the act of a "CBer", and then swung completely about and used it as a justification for the description of a 'radio ham'. I've lost count now of how many times this circle has been gone round. It must make anyone who is keen on becoming a 'radio ham' very confused, as the fundamental basis on which it is built changes so often!

Another talks about the service that amateur radio gave during WWII, but as I read the history, Amateur Radio was shut down during WWII. I

Yes, with 4 radials each at 20-40-80. I will let you know how it works I will not be done unstill next week. Mounting the antenna is easy. it's running the coax that is a bitch.

I wonder where the law stands as far as CB radio's go. Are CB's allowed to be repaired by the average CB'er who has the knowledge or are they only repairable by a qualified technician of some kind. I ask along the lines of the UK but would find the answer for America just as interesting.

If the antenna was correctly tuned it would make no difference what it was to the radio you were using. Three things spring to mind.

1/ The co-ax was damaged when the antenna fell off the roof in the first place causing a possible intermittant break of the inner core .. or..
2/ The radio itself has an intermittant fault. Quite possibly dry joints on the circuit board on a model that old.
3/ The power supply lead you have connected the radio to is dodgy. Try taking a couple of wires (fused near the battery of course) from the battery to the CB radio... possibly through a supressor of some kind ... by-passing any possible faulty wiring in the car itself.

There are plenty of heavy duty magmounts available for the larger mobile antennas including a tripod type magmount affair with the antenna mounting on a bracket between the 3. The wind will never blow this off... only thing is you might have trouble getting it off at night but if you leave the base on the car there would be no problem.
The surface area of a 5ft firestik is pretty large and suffers from wind shear much more than a base loaded coil. Unless you have something pretty severe as a base you will have problems, even with the 4ft version.

Graham

I can't answer your question, but perhaps this is one of those cases where it is better not to ask, but to carry on as before. Having a piece of gear repaired by a certified authority will probably cost more than buying a new one....

Thanks for that, quick answer too :o)
I would agree about the cost from a Certified Authority as most CB's in the UK are only worth between $26 - $52 and the repair bill from a qualified "tech" would be more than this... and would they indeed bother as they could make far more money with the same effort repairing other items more valuable...
I was just curious as to the legallity of repairing a CB. I wasnt admitting to anything.. honest .... ;o)

Ok Magnum,

Thanks for the input.

I'll check my fuse box to see if I blew a fuse. I was just sitting in the driveway when I started the engine. The CB came on at the same time as the radio. It looked normal for a few seconds, then it went black and no amount of fiddling with it, or the lighter connection would make it light up again. The antenna fell off when I started backing out of the driveway, and it fell off again as I was going down the road about 400 yards away.

If the fuse is blown, then maybe I need to install a stronger fuse to handle the CB action?

I'm going to look for a larger diameter magnet after while, or go down to the 4 foot.

Of course being a novice that might not be the best thing. so I'm open to all suggestions.

The fuse has blown for a reason (if it did actually blow) If the antenna feeder was damaged and the rig was struggling with high SWR on TX then it would draw more current which might possibly be why the fuse blew (if it did). I wouldnt go over a 3A fuse if you do put a higher one in though...

The wind shear factor of the firestik at medium speed would still need a heavy duty base. One like the DV27's used to come with would be no good (just in case he thinks of it). Were talking 5ft Firestik here which, like i said perviously, has a big mass in comparison to..say a modulator or half-breed type antenna. Unless he goes for a base loaded antenna with a steel whip of course which i think he has the base for right now. It certainly isnt a Firestik base.

Oh god.... get yourself a SWR meter man and give it a good checking out. You might even have the inner and outer wires of the co-ax shorting out in the PL259 plug. Unless its a top tuned Firestik you might need to cut bits off it to SWR it in... might be a good idea to read up about that though before attempting it... Have you tried powering up the Cobra on another setup?

I'm not sure why this thread is even being cross-posted into a CB group, but to answer your question, in the US, the radio must be serviced by a qualified, licensed individual. That is the "legal" way of doing it anyway.
It doesn't happen very often, but that is another story for another time...

Get a new rule book like one that is newer than say about 10 or so years. The CB radios in the US has not required a license to repair them in many years. The GROL is the replacement for the 1st and 2 nd class licenses that used to be required to repair many transmitters. For about 95 % of the transmitters in the US it is now worthless and not needed. Some companies may require it as they think they are getting someone that may know something. Now it is only needed for :

General Radiotelephone Operator License (GROL) is required to adjust maintain, or internally repair FCC licensed radiotelephone transmitters in the aviation, maritime and international fixed public radio services. It conveys all of the operating authority of the MROP.

It is required to operate the following:

any maritime land radio station or compulsorily equipped ship radiotelephone station operating with more than 1500 watts of peak envelope power;

voluntarily equipped ship and aeronautical (including aircraft) stations with more than 1000 watts of peak envelope power

Go here for more info on the licenses that are now issued.

See comments above about license not needed any more for CB repair in the US.

It used to be the Amateur tests were about on par with the comercial class licenses. The main differance was just the regulatory rules and not the electrical part. That was about 1972 when I passed the 1 st class license. The way they are now anyone with a good memory can pass the tests. My wife passed the Technichan class about 1987 or 88 just by memorizing the Q&A pool. She doesn't know or care about the technical part of radio.

well I make a point of never saying never about such things but I agree it is very unlikely indeed he has to do or say something that in fact firghtens or disturbs me and that I don't feel I can handle the mouses are going on about a threat made by posting someone else address and phone who shares my name but isn't along with a week worth of threats at me impling that poster palned to crucify me, given the existance ofdanger however slight to someone I felt I had the incident

I purposely bought a vehicle with a metal bumper. I have a massive Francis stud holding my Firestik KW-7. It is dirctional on the rear bumper, but it makes skip work real well toward the front of the vehicle. Sideband and a 2x455 box make this setup talk some skip. Screw AM.

I do 11 meter sideband and 2 meter FM simplex.
Catch you on the air!

If people want to play with the figures in that way...
More people want to change the licensing rules than want to keep it as it is.

Once you start adding together figures from different groups, you can make it what you want.
For example, how often does a Prime Minister or President get in power with over 50%?
As is usual for a government, more people wanted Tony Blair out than wanted him in! You can only combine figures if you can combine the actions in the same way. Fine if you want to divide power between two political groups, but you cannot combine keeping the same licence rules with changing the length... it's either one or the other.

> RESTRUCTURING: UK POLL SHOWS HAMS OPPOSE LICENSING FOR LIFE

Playing with figures that way shows that a much larger majority oppose the yearly licence. If people want to use the figures that way then, as 52% are opposed to licensing for life while a larger 71% are opposed to yearly licensing, there can be no choice but to change the licence.

Personally, I think that a longer period would be a good middle ground to take. Those wanting a lifetime licence should not complain, as it is a move in their direction.
So, although 26% may be unhappy, the large majority of Amateurs should be happy with that result. If that 26% cannot accept simply extending the period, which would still require renewal, Maybe Ofcom could allow them to renew their licence yearly.
Why deny them the opportunity to fill in unnecessary paperwork and to throw money at the Government.

Regards,

Peter.

Get a 12 VDC power supply - about 5 amp; attach the CB to the power supply - making sure to connect the positive (red) and negative (black) wires to the correct terminals of the power supply, then plug the power supply into an outlet. Before using the CB, attach an antenna; most convenient will be a mag-mount mobile one (get one total about 5' high) on top of a file cabinet or low steel bookshelf.

No $4 to park! No $6 admission! http://www.INTERNET-GUN-SHOW.com

Well,

I went to Joe Lorberg the CB expert and he found a blown fuse in the Cobra 148. I haven't used the unit for about ten years so that is not such a big deal.

He replaced that and the unit was working fine again.

The antenna blew off the trunk as I was driving along at about 30 MPH There was no wind blowing.

So the 5' Firestik mounted in the 5" diameter magnetic base is not going to work.

It is really odd because I drove five miles up I-55 from the truck stop at about 65 mph and it stayed on. It now keeps coming off in town at speeds of 30mph or lower.

I need to find someone who can install a permanent mount on my trunk I guess.

1222. Which CB antenna is best for a sub compact 1992 Mercury Tracer?

Allo people,

I'm going down to the truck stop now to get a permanent mount for my CB antenna and my 5' Firestik.

I'm curious though as to which of the multitude of brands is the best one for a small car?

Are there any differences? Or is the K-40 no better or worse than a Francis, Wilson, or Radio Shack, or A Firestik, or some other brand?

I'm just looking for maximum transmission and reception.

Sage advice will be appreciated.

Merci mille

Ok, I have decided to go with the 102" steel whip with 6" spring for a total of 108" or 1/4 wave. I am planning on mounting the antenna behind the driver side on the bedrail approx. 12-18" from the cab. It is an older Dodge ram long-wheel base, so the drilling is not a problem for where I am going to mount the antenna. (long wheel base may give me a real good ground plane, hopefully) I am running a Cobra 25 LTD in the truck. The antenna mounting bracket is aluminum I believe, so I may need to fabricate one myself from steel for good grounding.

Also, I am hunting some coax for my base setup. I want to go with RG8 I believe, but RG58 is all I can seem to find in the 30-50' range. Will there be too much loss with the RG58? I can get a length custom made, but I need it soon and the CB shop is down for now. It is a Cobra 142 GTL radio with an Antron 99 antenna with the top section replaced with another 102" steel whip after the wind took the original someplace else.

Any thoughts or suggestions on these two setups will be greatly appreciated.

Thanks

I would guess a fair amount dont really care about the technical side or would want to build their own radio and linear. You would have to be pretty dedicated for that. I would also guess at most Amateurs are happy just talking legally with a licence and a stock bought radio and antenna. Not that theres anything wrong with that, it just depends on how serious you take the hobby. Like the M3 foundation licence. It suits a lot of people who are.. disillusioned with CB and want to go Amateur but not really wishing to get so involved with the whole technical side of things. There are some good M3 people out there whatever the old school say, but i agree they will never be on a par with a full licence holder but is that such a terrible thing.

Get some RG-8m and put your own connectors on it. Coax length does NOT matter. A properly installed 1/4 wave will have an SWR of 1.56:1 because it is a 30 ohm antenna. Do not trim antenna or coax trying to get less then 1.56:1, it won't happen and it won't affect the radio either.

If you don't what holes drilled, the K40 and Wilson 1000 magmount both are excellent for barefoot. If you plan on running power, stay with the Wilson 1000.

It should be a 50 ohm antenna. RG-8 is fine, NOT radio shack junk.
If not RG-8X (or M) is fine. If you use the 8X or M, you will need a reducer.
THe one for 59 U is the one you will need, NOT a reducer for 58U. RG-8X
is the physical size of RG-59U (cable stuff)

I don't have any problem with the ones that just want to talk. There are many good hams in public service providing communications for emergencies. I know one ham that got his license many years ago so he could fly his radio controled airplane and use 6 meters where there were few others using that frequency.

I do wish that the test could be hands on for a few simple things such as installing a coax connector and and using a simple SWR meter. Also it should be required to have a ARRL handbook or equivilent in the shack. Would not even have to be a new one, but one 10 years old would be ok. Not that many would really read it but it could answer some simple questions.

For CB use, the RS RG-8m is just fine. You need RG-175 reducers for RG-58, and RG-176 reducers for RG-8m. I'm using Belden "Truck King" RG-8m that I picked up at a CB shop some years ago. I'm also using a bunch of RS RG-8m for short runs on 2 meters. (20 feet maximum) For HF, RG-8m is fine for runs of up to 50 feet. On VHF you want something better if you run more then 15 or 20 feet. Couplers get touchy at VHF. Imagine UHF!!!

after in Indenpendance Day they managed to send the CW under the aliens

That and the movie "The Poseidon Adventure". They tapped out code on the

Mr Riddle your have that wrong I know the movie well (unless you are refering to something out a new movie I saw an ad for) no morse code usd in the shaft alley just banging away till they were ehard by the

Would there be too much loss in RG-58 coax for the base? Only a 30-50' run.

I don't think the mobile installation matters all that much, but I could be wrong. I might try to find some Mini 8 for the mobile, RG 8 will prolly be too bundlesome. If not, I will try some RG-58 with it as well.

Will this be going in the wrong direction entirely (too much loss)?

I use 102" whip, 6" & another 4" firestik heavy duty spring. I'm running a magnum 257 w/extended coverage.
(Hams can do that legally), my swr is darn near flat 40 above & 40 below. Experiment & see what works best for you. Every installation is different.

Hmmm....

You can modify any radio to operate in an amateur allocation.
You can't use a Part 97 radio on any type-accepted service.

I can use my 2950 on 10 meters. I'm not supposed to move the jumpers and use it on 11 meters.

With that said, don't get caught. I've used my IC-2100 on MURS and my HTX-420 on FRS and my 2950 on 11 meters...

(too many damn rules!)

Anyone got a 420MHz AM ATV setup for sale, cheap?

My Handbook (not ARRL) is much older, but I wasn't aware of any change in the physics in the interim. Why choose ten years? The Admiralty handbook is still relevant - and can answer questions - even if the units have changed. You appear to be a newcomer.

Why?

Countless reports from Pearl Harbor stated that such bangings were heard from the hulls of various ships for days after the attacks. Some resulted in rescues...All too many just faded away.

ho many of them used morse signal that was the claim tapping out morse never saw such a report if you want to show me a claim from the day that morse coded tapping was used form decent source I'll admit the calim but mere claims of tapping say nothing about morse code use in that atpping

You need a nap, Markie. The typos are getting worse.

I didn't say it was "Morse Code", Markie. I said they were "bangings".

You quoted my exact words then try to say something quite different in the response.

No, not your question, the whole thread, which was a rant about "Ham Radio".
Had nothing to do with CB, except for a brief reference.

OK, if you want to get technical, a "license" per-say is not needed, though they still need to be "certified as technically qualified to perform transmitter maintenance and repair duties in the private land mobile services and fixed services by an organization or committee representative of users in those services." - Reference FCC Part 95, Section 95.424 subsection "b".

And as the question that was asked, in relation to the US:
"Are CB's allowed to be repaired by the average CB'er who has the knowledge or are they only repairable by a qualified technician of some kind[?]"
The answer to the first part of the question is still NO, and the second part is still, YES. The "average CB'er who has the knowledge" can NOT service their own CB, legally. They would need to be "certified" to do so "by an organization or committee representative of users in [the CB service]."

I quite agree. I also personally think to obtain a CB licence (UK im talking here) there should be a small test.. nothing complicated, just wiring on a PL259 correctly and how to use a SWR meter (as you say for Amateur too).
Thats two basic things ive seen either ignored or very badly done.. ie.
someone twisting the inner and outer of the co-ax together and shoving it through the hole in the PL.... then they wonder why the radio they just bought off you wont get out.... or someone say..swred an antenna?? whats that then?? sheesh..

Exceedingly unlikely now as to all intents and purposes the CB band isnt of interest to the authorities that be.
Oh well..............

Oh right.... mind you theres that much Ham stuff on the website is it a problem? I just read it with some interest and ask points that i think might be relevent. Theres more stuff about liars and army service on this group though for some reason. That i dont get.

You need to learn to shoe a horse before you can drive a car!

Same difference. The NPRM is in the works. I'm already signed up for the first test session after code goes away. I passed element 2 and 3 with no studying, and missed 4 by two questions. I've since borrowed the extra book from the library and read it.

I have no problem with anyone who likes code. I even believe there should be space for nothing but code, not mixed with other weak signal modes. I just don't want it forced down my throat. I might finish learning it if I don't have to.

Pot, kettle, black. Bad apples like yourself are a dime a dozen. You come into rec.radio.cb, troll a little, make a lout of yourself and unintentionally get educated by cb'ers. It pisses you off to the point of reducing yourself to personal insult. You then make angry, biased and baseless accusations after your taunts failed to elicit the response your ego needed.
Failing yet again, you are forced to slime away and deal with your weaknesses.
You're another example of the worst amateur radio has to example,,,a lid with no balls with the need to insult others who never grew up and was never taught how to communicate properly. Get over yourself, stop throwing hissy fits and tantrums when you're wrong, grow the fuck up and grow a set and learn what it means to admit when you're wrong. N7ZZT, another scumbag hypocrite.

Whoa. Try and remain relevant. The repubs are in control and have been for over 5 years. I realize you have been suckered/conned into making any criticism of Bush a circular argument by invoking democrats. Such is your problem, not anyone elses..well, besides the lone holdout sheople of the Bush supporters, who btw, are becoming less in number each day.

>that saw

>the same intelligence as Bush were liars too?

The intel Bush saw was crafted by his admin. You are blaming these demos while trying very hard to not discuss Bush when the buck stops with him. Sure I fault those demos you refer, because they fell for his bullshit lies regarding Iraq. I, on the the other hand, as well as many others, did not.

>You blatantly toe the Democrat line

What line is that? Really,,,this should be good, as the only thing I'm politically guilty of is disagreeing with Bush and I've never been a democrat in my life. You erroneously an d ignorantly assume because I detract from the Bush admin, I must be a democrat. This exact ignorant polarization from the Bush admin is what began the topple of his house of cards constructed of smoke, mirrors, and outright lies. Your definition of the "democrat line" certainly has nothing to do with the failure of Bush.

>and spew all of their misinformed talking >points.

While I give you facts regarding Bush, you would rather focus on -me- and or the demos , a Rovian tactic that no longer is permissable or workable, thanks to folks like Fitzgerald and good republicans who are deserting Bush faster than rats desert a sinking ship.
Funny thing is, you're way wrong about my political leanings, to, so the masses can figure out how clueless you must be about everything else since you illustrate your feelings are based on nothing more than assumptions,,incorrect ones at that.

Try and remain lucid and not allow your political partisanship to goad you into reducing yourself any further.

>I would ask for your proof, but I am afraid you >will link me to Fatty Moore's or some other

You have already assumed incorrectly and haphazardly based only on your own conjurations. What you are afraid of, as is the entire Bush admin, is truth, as the truth has been stonewalled and obstructed all through this admin.

>Do you get all of your news from the >Hollyweird left?

>Are you really so out of it man?

Actually, the majority of the country agreees with me.

>.Again, you overestimate the opposition to the

I do no such thing. You keep making glaring errors of assumptions..the latest, that GW's failure as a president and the Iraq war war are one and the same.

>War is not so bad and in fact it is a good thing.
Not pre-emptive war. And people like you only say such things when it's other people's kids dying. Not a single bush admin member OR repub rep has a child serving active duty in Iraq. Not one.

>Would you have us lay belly-up and allow the >Muslims overrun our country?

>You seem to have little understanding of how >the government works and what has really >happened.

And you seem to be of the suckered mentality, er, I mean "persuasion" that Iraq had some remote connection to 911 when in fact, it didn't at all. The Bush admin admitted this publicly. if you weren't guilty of blindly supporting your party, you might actually know what the hell it is your president has said regarding these things.
In retrospect, neocons have changed their reasons for war as frequently as the seasons change. None have withstood scrutiny and they were all found to be baseless.

>You know that congress is in on all of it, right?

>They saw all of the same intelligence that

>Bush saw, well at least the U.S. Senate >committee on intelligence did and there are

>Dumbocrats on that committee.

Ahhh,,so your hatred for those who hold opposing political views is revealed through more insult. You know, that is the very thing America stands for and our soldiers die(d) for throughout history,,,,,the right to freedom of expression and tolerance of opposing views without fear of reprisal for freely espousing those views. Except, of course, shining examples like yourself who illustrate perfectly their tolerance for opposing views by their own countrymen..

>Look for yourself.

>http://intelligence.senate.gov/

>Are you blind to >political maneuvering or what?

How many ways do you have asking the same question looking for a different answer? That's what children do when they want something and were already corrected and told "no".
Once again, the demos you refer believed the deliberate false intel Bush brought forth. Even the Italians are now prosecuting their guy responsible for the doctored intel that Bush used to present his case for war on Iraq that claimed Hussein was attempting to purchase yellow cake from Niger (he wasn't). The Italians came forth and admitted collusion with the Bush admin. Now the entire word knows what took place.
In fact, if you were paying attention instead of blatantly screaming partisan rhetoric, this same group of Italians gave testimony TODAY about the US dropping white phosphorous on Falluja in the first days of the attacks on that city. Do you know what that is? That's called chemical warfare. The next pics are the ones the Italians release of the Falluja women and children (now ALL Iraqi body counts are referred to as insurgents) burned in the streets like the pics from Nam of the nepalm victims.
Yes, you have definitely proved you have little understanding what is taking place around you. read up on the yellow cake issue regarding the lies told concerning Niger.

>Do I need to lexis nexis up all of the >WMD's. It was fucking common knowledge

No,,it was common belief. Common knowledge is based on facts, something the Bush admin never had, not once.

>and to proclaim they did not exist now is just >plain stupid.

Yet, you not only assumed (again) they existed, you proclained it in the absence of zero evidence and your president telling the country they didn't.

> Where are they? We don't know,

Bush, and you, never did know,

>but did they exist? YES!

More assumptions but what's more interesting, is the argument you make against the Bush admin when they admitted there were none there.
WMD's are not simply loaded into trucks or trunks of vehicles and moved over the border to Syria. Such a maneuver requires mass movement of transit with many vehicles. Spy satellites would have picked up any such large movements. Claiming Iraq had them and managed to keep them away from Bush would serve only to illustrate another Bush failure, as his exact words exist all over google in his speech..Bush claimed (in presenting his second reason for war, as his first "Operation Free Iraq" was denied by Congress, so it was NEVER about freedom of the Iraqi people or freeing the people from a mean, bad man) that we must invade to "Stop the spread, transfer, and proliferation" of WMDS. Here you are saying he failed to do so and that they were snaked out right underneath all the high technology spy satellites that can not only read a license plate, but the print off a newspaper held by a man on the street. MORE Bush failure.

>Nothing against you personally,

Then stick to the facts of the matter and try not to obsess so much on myself and rely more on the topic to capture your attention.

>but Bush is no worse than any other politician >and the lies

>that the Dumbocrats are spinning are hard to >believe.

You mean like reminding Bush of his lies like restoring honor and integrity to the WH, and doing what is right and not merely what is just legal? You mean like his promise of firing ANYONE in his admin who was "involved" in the Plame case, then renigueing and changing his words when it was found out his admin was not only involved but responsible for the entire case? And those are only the most recent. Are you really so out of it, man, that you blame the democrats after 5 years of republican control?
The country is in deep shit, the repubs did it all, and Bush sheople

(although their numbers are shrinking) still blame demos. Now THAT'S what I refer to as "out if it".

>.Valerie Plame is a joke. Even her neighbors >knew she was a k00k.

Regardless, it was no reason to out her. Her friends did not know she was a CIA spook. Her kid's treachers did not know. You make a defense on an assumption for a vile and despicable act.

>Libby resigned... What more do you want?

Libby resigned only AFTER being caught and the shit hit the fan. Bush should have fired him as SOON as he found he was involved, as he promised he would do from the beginning. He "lied" again, and you continue yo make excuses for his lies and treasonist behavior.
Or is holding the man to his word too much too ask? It must be, as you invoke Plame was a "kook" as some pathetic defense of Libby.

>Joe Wilson is a fucking tool of his wife and the >Dumbocrats and if you had half of a brain you >would see what is really going on there.

And if you were more educated in the art of communication, you would learn insult coupled with debate serves only to illustrate how little skill you really possess. Sorry you feel so poorly about yourself that you are reduced to insult.

>Joe Wilson is a liar.

You're one of those liberals..a liberal is a republican who has just been arrested and charged.
If Joe Wilson was a felon, it still does not excuse the deliberate outing and actions by the Bush admin. And the only liars are those who told us about the existence of WMDS in Iraq, that told us t Hussein was after Uranium in Niger, that Jessica Lynch fought off enemy terrorists valiantly wounding several (she never fired a shot, read her book) until captured. More? Sure,,here's a quote from Dick Cheney from NBC' Meet the Press, March 16, 2003:
"We believe Hussein has, in fact, reconstituted nuclear weapons." Now, here is not two months later, on May 14, 2003, at the hearing of the Senate's appropriations subcommittee on defense: "I don't believe anyone that I know in the administration ever said that Iraq had nuclear capabilities". Double-tallk and 100% bullshit lies! "Nuff said!

>And may I ask how our >country is in "deep shit"?

A VP that not only condones, but fought legislation outlawing torture. A president who has the entire world angry at the US and who has made it unsafer for Americans worldwide.

A VP who deliberately outed a CIA agent for personal vendettas. An admin that lies about everything.

>Your credibility is >waning after stupid comments like that.

(shrug) You never had any as you come out the gate shooting personal insults. I indulge whoever I please at whim.

>In fact almost all are easily debunked.

Then you better get busy focusing on one, 'cause you're batting zero here.
The Bush admin is unraveling day by day as the demos sit back and allow it to happen.
Anyways, Fitzgerald has a grasp of that loose thread and he isn't letting go. That old tired process of the admin attacking all their detractors and all who criticize is no longer being permitted by Fitz!

>.So it's ok for the Dumbocrats to play political >games, but if the Republicans do it then it is a >crime? Hmmmm...

The democrats aren't in office and when they were, they indeed did face charges for breaking the law. The republicans are in office and they fucked up and now they need to pay the piper,,something people like you have demonstrated a propensity against,,taking personal responsibility when you fuck up.
Your irony is not lost here, as this particular admin is made up of much of the same neocons that tried to crucify Clinton over lying about sex, yet you are using the demos behavior as a way to justify the criminal republican behavior taking place in the current Bush admin and WH. That no longer works. The demos arent the ones indicted and under investigation, that was another presidency. The repubs are in office, have been, and are being made to stand for the mess they created. You ought try living in the present instead of the past.

>Anyway... peace man.

You too, dude!

>I don't hate you, but I sure don't understand >you or your logic.

You select an odd manner of expressing it.

Why don't they go after the CB Shops, Truck Washes, etc in Indiana and Louisville, as well as other places.
Sometime it is impossible to get the full lowdown on a traffic problem around Louisville and Indianapolis because they want to wash your truck or sell you a radio, tools, assorted junk, or a hoker.

The 10 year number for the book was just one out of the air. Older would have been just fine. My first ARRL hand book was bought in 1966. I did not get a ham license untuil about 1972. Had a 1 st class radiotelephone license around the same time. I have only used RTTY with an old mechanical unit, been keeping up a repeater for close to 30 years, I did write a rtty program for an old 8080 processor when I got tired of hearing the noise, used a few of the newer digital modes with the computer, worked a few of the OSCARs, active on 144 and 432 ssb. I do work some of the low bands also.
Guess that still makes me a newcomer to many.

Speaking of rules, some of those FCC actions included a discussion of the "export" radios. It said the OET has a list of 10 meter radios that are actually CB transceivers as this "feature" can be added/restored with a jumper or wire. They now claim these radios are illegal to use in the USA. I would assume if you are an amateur with a valid General class ticket with an unmodified 2950, you would be OK. If you're caught with the jumpers moved, you're in deep doo doo. Bottom line, an "export" or 10 meter CB is not legal to use, period.

Reality - If you're not bothering anyone and staying on regular channels, no one will notice or bother you. If you run a clipped radio into a class C splatterbox at maximum deadkey, you get what you deserve!

Now go talk on a radio somewhere, dammit! It takes the same kind of person to sit behind a mike and talk to strangers whether it's on Part 95 or Part 97. White, black, male, female. Same thing...

I use all the radio bands I'm allowed. Some folks stay in one place.
Others can be found all over. Some nights the CB is too noisy. Some nights local propagation is good and the skip is gone. Some nights
2 meters is open for hundreds of miles. Expand your horizons. :)

I've hit repeaters in northern PA and talked with folks in upstate NY.
On simplex, I talked to Long Island. That guy had a huge beam.
I used 3 elements. Got the QSL card to prove it.

Do you have a ham ticket? I'm just wondering. I got mine back in '03. I still use CB. If you've got your ticket, send me an email, we'll exchange callsigns and meet on echolink. This email is good if you remove DONTSPAMME.

in the US it noramly the case that you need more than 50 persent to be elected (not much more) and there are ofcourse kinky exception in the Us system in theroy would allow a president to take office with some about 25 % of the vote if they lived in exactly the right places

My CB is still hooked, it still works and it still gets used.
It is just one band of many. They're all different.

The problem with that is it essentially means that every now and then, in order to keep within the licence terms, one has to purchase a book.

Here in the UK we have problems with an organisation that has put itself in the position of 'representing all UK amateurs', and which sells books. It clearly does not do the former, and merely to add to its coffers as part of the licencing conditions is a battle which it has recently fought and looks like losing heavily.

>Older would have been just fine.
>My first ARRL hand book was bought in 1966.

Then why specify a time limit? Or even to have such a book in the first place?

There is nothing wrong with your Amateur CV. The issue - at least for us in the UK - is the grasping self-interest of the 'national society', which has been so clearly revealed by recent events, and to which your proposal would add succour; that was really the point of my post.

How come all the self-proclaimed "real amateurs" huffing and puffing on this thread sign their postings only with a "handle" and not a call sign? Are they really amateurs at all?

1282. Make $50,000 from $6.00 investment

Make $50,000 with only $6.00

Body: HOW TO TURN $6 INTO $6,000!!!!!! READING THIS COULD CHANGE YOUR LIFE! IT CHANGED MINE...

I found this on a bulletin board and decided to try it. A little while Back, I was browsing through newsgroups, just like you are now, and Came across an article similar to this that said you could make Thousands of dollars within weeks with only an initial investment of $6.00! So I thought, Yeah right, this must be a scam, but like most of Us, I was curious, so I kept reading. Anyway, it said that you send $1.00 to each of the 6 names and address stated in the article. You Then place your own name and address in the bottom of the list at ..6, And post the article in at least 200 newsgroups. (There are thousands) No catch, that was it. So after thinking it over, and talking to a few People first, I thought about trying it. I figured: what have I got to Lose except 6 stamps and $6.00, right? Then I invested the measly $6.00.

Well GUESS WHAT!! Within 7 days, I started getting money in the mail! I was shocked! I Figured it would end soon, but the money just kept coming in. In my First week, I made about $25.00. By the end of the second week I had Made a total of over $1,000.00! In the third week I had over $10,000.00 And it's still growing. This is now my fourth week and I have made a total of just over $42,000.00 and it's still coming in rapidly. It's certainly worth $6.00, and 6 stamps. I was in a bad economic state before I found this Article... I didn't believe this really worked until I ACTUALLY started Getting mail from all over the world... I bought everything I needed... This idea came in the right time exactly :-) Let me tell you how this works and most importantly, why it Works....Also, make sure you print a copy of this article NOW, so you Can get the information off of it as you need it. I promise you that if you follow the directions exactly, that you will Start making more money than you thought possible by doing something so Easy! Suggestion: Read this entire message carefully! (print it out or Download it.) Follow the simple directions and watch the money come in! It's easy. It's legal. And, your investment is only $6.00 (Plus postage) IMPORTANT: This is not a rip-off; it is not indecent; it is not Illegal; and it is virtually no risk - it really Works!!!! If all of the following instructions are adhered to, you will Receive extraordinary dividends. PLEASE NOTE: Please follow these directions EXACTLY, and $50,000 or More can be yours in 20 to 60 days. This program remains successful Because of the HONESTY AND INTEGRITY of the participants. Please continue its success by carefully adhering to the instructions. You will now become part of the Mail Order business. In this business Your product is not solid and tangible, it's a service. You are in the Business of developing Mailing Lists. Many large corporations are happy To pay big bucks for quality lists. However, the money made from the Mailing lists is secondary to the income which is made from people like You and me asking to be included in that list. Here are the 4 easy Steps to success:

STEP 1: Get 6 separate pieces of paper and write the following on each Piece of paper; PLEASE PUT ME ON YOUR MAILING LIST..along with your name and address. Now get 6 US $1.00 bills and place ONE inside EACH of the 6 pieces of Paper so the bill will not be seen through the envelope (to prevent Thievery). Next, place one paper in each of the 6 envelopes and seal Them. You should now have 6 sealed envelopes, each with a piece of Paper stating the above phrase, your name and address, and a $1.00 Bill. What you are doing is creating a service. THIS IS ABSOLUTELY LEGAL! You are requesting a legitimate service and you are paying for it! Like most of us I was a little skeptical and a Little worried about the legal aspects of it all. So I checked it out with the U.S. Post Office (1-800-725-2161) and they Confirmed that it is indeed legal! MAIL THE 6 ENVELOPES TO THE FOLLOWING ADDRESSES:

(1)Michael Zicarelli 230 Erie Rd Vermilion,Ohio 44089 ..(2) Jesse Castro Jr. 4246 W. CORNELL Ave Fresno, CA 93722 ..(3) Angel Scott 2928 EAST CROMWELL AVE, FRESNO, CA 93722 ..(4) Christobal Micheal - 4676 E. Alamos Ave unit 125 - Fresno, CA 93726 (5) Sean Tyler - 37638 E Knieriem Rd. - Corbett, OR 97019 (6)
Ashley Barnette- 3236 Mercer Univ. Dr. # 301 Chamblee, GA 30341

STEP 2: Now take the ..1st name off the list that you see above, move the Other names up (6 becomes 5, 5 becomes 4, etc...) and add YOUR NAME as Number 6 on the list.

STEP 3: Change anything you need to, but try to keep this article as Close to original as possible. Now, post your amended article to at Least 200 newsgroups. (I think there are close to 24,000 groups) All You need is 200, but remember, the more you post, the more money you Make! This is perfectly legal! If you have any doubts, refer to Title 18 Sec. 1302 & 1341 of the Postal lottery laws. Keep a copy of these steps for yourself and, Whenever you need money, you can use it again and again. PLEASE REMEMBER that this program remains successful because of the HONESTY AND INTEGRITY of the participants and by their carefully Adhering to the directions. Look at it this way. If you are of Integrity, the program will continue and the money that so many others Have received will come your way. NOTE: You may want to retain every name and address sent to you, either On a computer or hard copy and keep the notes people send you. This VERIFIES that you are truly providing a service. (Also, it might be a Good idea to wrap the $1 bill in dark paper to reduce the risk of mail Theft). So, as each post is downloaded and the directions carefully Followed, six members will be reimbursed for their participation as a List Developer with one dollar each. Your name will move up the list Geometrically so that when your name reaches the ..1 position you will Be receiving thousands of dollars in CASH!!! What an opportunity for only $6.00 ($1.00 for each of the first Six people listed above) Send it now, add your own name to The list and you're in business!

---------- DIRECTIONS FOR HOW TO POST TO NEWSGROUPS---------- STEP 1) You do not need to re-type this entire letter to do your own Posting. Simply put your cursor at the beginning of this letter and Drag your cursor to the bottom of this document, and select 'copy' from The edit menu. This will copy the entire letter into the computer's Memory.

STEP 2) Open a blank 'notepad' file and place your cursor at the top of The blank page. From the 'edit' menu select 'paste'. This will paste a Copy of the letter into notepad so that you can add your name to the List.

STEP 3) Save your new notepad file as a .txt file. If you want to do Your postings in different settings, you'll always have this file to go Back to.

STEP 4) Use Netscape or Internet explorer and try searching for various Newsgroups (on-line forums, message boards, chat sites, discussions.) (Just example you log on any search engine like yahoo.com, google.com, Altavista.com, excite.com then you search with this subject millionaire Message board? or money making message board? or employment message Board? or money making discussions? or money making forum? or business Message board? etc. You will find thousand & thousand message board.)

STEP 5) Visit these message boards and post this article as a new Message by highlighting the text of this letter and selecting paste >From the edit menu. Fill in the Subject, this will be the header that Everyone sees as they scroll through the list of postings in a Particular group, click the post message button. You're done with your First one! Congratulations...THAT'S IT! All you have to do is jump to Different newsgroups and post away, after you get the hang of it, it Will take about 30 seconds for each newsgroup!

REMEMBER, THE MORE NEWSGROUPS YOU POST IN,THE MORE MONEY YOU WILL MAKE!! BUT YOU HAVE TO POST A MINIMUM OF 200

That's it! You will begin receiving money from around the world within Days! You may eventually want to rent a P.O.Box due to the large amount Of mail you will receive. If you wish to stay anonymous, you can invent A name to use, as long as the postman will deliver it.

JUST MAKE SURE ALL THE ADDRESSES ARE CORRECT.

Now the WHY part: Out of 200 postings, say I receive only 5 replies (a Very low example). So then I made $5.00 with my name at ..6 on the Letter. Now, each of the 5 persons who just sent me $1.00 make the MINIMUM 200 postings, each with my name at ..5 and only 5 persons Respond to each of the original 5, that is another $25.00 for me, now

Those 25 each make 200 MINIMUM posts with my name at ..4 and only 5
Replies each, I will bring in an additional $125.00! Now, those 125 Persons turn around and post the MINIMUM 200 with my name at ..3 and Only receive 5 replies each, I will make an additional $626.00! OK, now Here is the fun part, each of those 625 persons post a MINIMUM 200
Letters with my name at ..2 and they each only receive 5 replies, that Just made me $3,125.00!!! Those 3,125 persons will all deliver this Understandable. In my town, CB is mostly dead. There is a sideband net on Tuesday nights. There are homies on 22 that overdrive their radios and I can't hear anything when they do that. Since most of the decent CBers went ham, I know where to find them. It's a matter of finding a usable frequency in Baltimore. CB is good because you can listen to a conversation for a while, throw in your comment, not have to identify, and be quiet for another half an hour.

K1MAN RESPONDS TO THE MOST TRUSTED MAN IN AMERICA, WALTER CRONKITE

9 November 2005

Walter Cronkite, KB2GSD
51 W. 52 St. Suite 1934
New York, N.Y. 10019

Walter,

I enjoyed the Neil Armstrong piece on "60 Minutes" yesterday. You were sure at the top of your game back then, for sure!

Dan Rather lectured at the University of Maine last week and suggested that journalists should get a "spine transplant." I immediately thought of you, caving in to anonymous hams and or unconfirmed false reports threatening to implicate you as well me with child molesting. Check your sources, Walter.

Perhaps you simply handled the matter wrongly. You did an ID for me when you were trying to promote your new autobiography. OK so far. You attached no limitations to my use of the ID. I used the ID on my world wide short wave program. Many of my detractors wrote to you and, of course, said I was illegal, etc., and that I was a convicted child molester, etc., which you would be associated with. Your secretary called me about the child molesting issue. You then wrote and asked me to stop using the ID. I agreed if you would come on my program and explain your reasons. You declined. I continued using the ID so as not to cave in to the blackmail as you were so willing to do. Then you call ME unethical?! Who is being unethical here?

You hypocrite! You lobby the FCC to revoke my license after John F. Kennedy threatened you and CBS with trying to influence the FCC when you insisted on running his flubbed remarks during a presidential campaign interview with you. You didn't cave in then!

Here is what you should have done with K1MAN. Ignore the idiots or else publish a disclaimer. Yes, you did the ID but no, you do not endorse AARA, or whatever; not publish a letter on the internet that Glenn Baxter is "unethical." Pretty strong word, Walter!

Believe me, if I were illegal doing what W1AW has done for almost 100 years, the FCC and U.S. Government are smart enough and powerful enough to do something about it other than defame me with their silly and anemic notices of APPARENT liability. Let's go to court, Walter, and I will call you as my first witness! God bless America, the land of the free and home of the brave.

The FCC is a corrupt agency. Big deal. This is America, and we do have some corruption. We also have laws. I am protected by our wonderful laws.

I am devoting a very critical chapter about you in my new philosophical autobiography which is being published on the internet as I write it. See www.K1MAN.com. Your scurrilous letter about me will be all over the internet for many years. You and your employee, Brian Crow, sure do take some real cheap shots! I feel truly sorry for both of you, but I forgive you both.

God bless you and your family. You looked just great on TV last night.

(signed)
Glenn Baxter, K1MAN

P.S. My book covers your many good traits as well as your very bad ones. Let the readers and history be the judge.

Paul wrote to the Philippians, New Living Translation:

1-28. "Don't be intimidated by your enemies. This will be a sign to them that they are going to be destroyed, but that you are going to be saved, even by God himself."

And, in the King James Version:

4-8. "Finally brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

Controversy is a good thing. Any issue regarding speech that makes the government edgy and uneasy is patriotic and exactly what our founding fathers envisioned. Jefferson said dissent is not only patriotic, but necessary.

Pot, kettle, black. Bad apples like yourself are a dime a dozen. You come into rec.radio.cb, troll a little, make a lout of yourself and unintentionally get educated by cb'ers. It pisses you off to the point of reducing yourself to personal insult. You then make angry, biased and baseless accusations after your taunts failed to elicit the response your ego needed.
  Failing yet again, you are forced to slime away and deal with your weaknesses.
You're another example of the worst amateur radio has to example,,,a lid with no balls with the need to insult others who never grew up and was never taught how to communicate properly. Get over yourself, stop throwing hissy fits and tantrums when you're wrong, grow the fuck up and grow a set and learn what it means to admit when you're wrong. N7ZZT, another scumbag hypocrite.

Got that statewide thing going on here now late at night when there's no skip. Us flatlanders are talking across the state barefoot late at night. Not that large a feat when all's quiet, but it's not skip.

I've got a feeling Mopar is one of those who listens on certain freqs more than he talks.
I've listened for many years to a freq where I am permitted to talk without ever saying a word there and I know I never will. Not my kind of folks, but a few are locals I know personally who are involved in other activities of which I am involved. All I can say is,,,,man, does the shit fly.

I believe it because I've done what many have told me wasn't possible regarding propagation.

I'm thinking of retiring very soon and selling to a yankee...they're paying outrageous prices for everything. When a house or business goes up 4 sale, they don't even check the tax base or public record to see what its worth, they just ante up whatever the asking price is,,,,Im telling you, it's crazy! I might make a web page with some of my favorite cards when I have nothing but time. We all have our favorite contacts and cards. What's yours?

FREE!!

For advanced techs and serious radio hobbyists, we're now offering a FREE copy of our previously published "CB EPROM DATA BOOK" by Martin Pickering. (EPROM = Erasable Programmable Read Only Memory.) We sold it for many years but it's now out of print. This little manual of 60 illustrated pages is an absolute GEM of CB technical knowledge you'll just never find anywhere else. And it's yours for FREE from our Web site.

This book reveals the secrets of advanced channel programming, and picks up where our "CB PLL DATA BOOK" (www.cbcintl.com/pllbook.htm) leaves off. You'll get a thorough background in how these amazing programmable chips can be used to modify many popular CB PLL circuits for expanded frequency coverage. Covers the basic programming techniques, and even includes real PC board artwork for making EPROM circuits. Sample artwork includes EPROM boards for the popular MB8719, PLL02A, ï¿½PD2824, and ï¿½PD858 PLL circuits.

Best of all, the price is right--namely, FREE! Download your FREE copy of "THE CB EPROM DATA BOOK" (948 KB Adobe PDF) at:

To learn the technical TRUTH about CB Radio without all the hype from people who are just plain ignorant, check out the following books from CBC International. They're selling right now at a big discounts on our EBAY & AMAZON stores too.

Check it out!

To see exactly what these books look like, plus all the specific, chapter-by-chapter details, see our Web at:

www.cbcintl.com

Some of the books included are:

BOOK #1: THE "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE To Peaking Out & Repairing CB Radios. List $25. The most popular "big dummy's" guide ever published on do-it-yourself CB repairs & modifications. Covers peaking of receivers, transmitters, modulation, mike problems, antenna & SWR problems, detailed frequency modifications for both crystal & PLL radios. Loaded with charts, illustrations, and specific instructions for most brands including the new export models. This latest edition also covers slider and broadbanding tricks, FM conversions, and much more!

BOOK #2: THE CB PLL DATA BOOK. List $20. The only complete reference source on CB PLL synthesizer circuits ever published! Detailed PLL theory explained in layman's terms. How they work, and how to modify them for many more channels. Includes specific PLL block mixing diagrams, truth charts, & IC pin function diagrams for nearly every PLL chip ever used. Covers all the most popular U.S. & export chassis, with specific listings of all models using the chip.

BOOK #3: UNDERSTANDING & REPAIRING CB RADIOS. List $42. Giant 370-page technical book for the professional repairman. Picks up where the "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE leaves off. Includes circuit descriptions & troubleshooting guide for 23- & 40-Ch., crystal & PLL, solid-state & tube, AM, FM, SSB, CW, American & export models. Covers test equipment (& where to find it), transistor basics, synthesizers, receivers, transmitters, power supplies, T/R switching, antennas, interference, parts & accessory sources. Over 350 illustrations including schematics, charts, and photos. Huge subject index also lets you look up repairs by symptoms. This is "must" reading for any serious CB technician!

That is, if some nut job from the council doesn't class it as "racist" to display your national flag. They wouldn't be the first to suggest it.

That has happened in Iran. Here, we are reaping what we have sown here in the U.S. Yep, the religious right has slammed Clinton and look what we have obtained with our voting. Lies, corruption, welfare for big business ... the list goes on and on .... Just don't do anything that could be construed in any way as terrorist as you may end up in some overseas jail posing naked or getting beaten - or worse. You won't have any access to courts or any redress should your accusers be wrong. Remember the government wanted truckers to spy for them? Better not have made any enemies with truckers. Anything is allowed so long as Allah has ordained it. Ooops, I misspoke. Anything is allowed so long as 'god' has ordained it (lower case intentional - I prefer not to use caps on this post. Hope you understand.). Meanwhile, load the Supreme Court with like 'thinkers'.

Your elite bullshit assumes twice incorrectly. You incorrectly assume if one is a cb'er one must not have their ticket and you again incorrectly assume that if one selectively and carefuly disregards a specific law, one is completely lawless and has respect for no law.
Good thing you found this group. You have much to learn.

I agree the FCC is a failed institution led by hacks with failed policies. For all that is said what your hero stands for, those views you espoused above are no better than that of an FCC thug.

There are secret organisations, societies and groups here in England. Prince Charles is a member of a secret organisation and, as such, is under oath to keep the secrets - even from other members of the royal family.
And, in that organisation, strange headgear has been known.

Proof that racism is racist...

A couple of days back, on the radio news, an Asian was being interviewed about the problems...
"they should go back where from they came".

Although the concept of an Asian Alf Garnet is not without it's funny side, if he had of been white he would be labeled as a racist.
But, not being white, he cannot possibly be racist... it's the law.

Peter.

If you really believe that it was "riddled with childish insults", then you should back that up with specifics... which parts are "childish insults" and who are they offending? Anything less, and I will assume that you accept that your post was in error, that you made some mistake in your interpretaion.

> illustrates well that you are a CBer.

As this is cross-posted to a CB group, and you decide to insult such people, you should expect people who use CB to be among the people responding.
However, if by "CBer", you refer to someone who uses CB as a form of communication, then you have shown how stupid it is to make assumptions.

Peter.

No, horse pss.

Around these parts, it is common for people to pronounce horse as "hoss" or, dropping the H,
'oss. This is exactly why my children found the word hospice funny... when they didn't have a clue what one is.

I'll give you a few pointers...

Hoss: Large four legged creature, often raced for money.
Dee: Cease to live. eg. "When he jumped out, I nearly deed of shock"
Bod: Feathered creature with wings. eg. "some of my bods deed of flu" Corsey: Pavement.
Wickend: Saturday and Sunday.

It is known for people to purposely use such pronunciations, either as part of their identity or to take the mickey out of people from different parts of the region.

> I just think the dead and dying deserve a bit of respect instead of > being used as the butt of a sick joke

He never mentioned the sick or dying, neither did he mention employees, specific organizations or specific people. This, along with the reference to liquid measure, should have made it obvious that it was a play on words.

Peter.

And since radio waves do not respect state or national boundaries, why is it that you don't believe that Article I, Section 8, Para 3 of the Constitution doesn't apply?

nope the supremacy clause applies first

It goes that treaties are the supreme law of the land now prior to the ITU treaty (or what ever what is now called the ITU treaty was caled then) I would agree the 10th likwely applies only the elsatic clause could apply to Ham radio certainly not the comerece clause (Comerce law was use to regulate the ARS at first but I beleiev that was legaly incorrect

but importantly the FCC holds the power of the gun so to speak wether the FCC is in or out of its constitutional power for the present IT hold the power to enforce liecnsure of the ARS k1man needs to see a headshrinker, and I mean FAST !

I mean it folks.

One minute he's biting your ankles like an enraged Chihuahua dog, the next minute he's on his back wanting you to rub his tummy and then wants to lick you like a puppy.

This guy is definitely got a BIPOLAR DISORDER.

For Glen's own good, I really hope he's on Prozac, Paxil, Luvox, Valium or some other orally administered psychotropic drug.

If not I am afraid he'll show up on the 6:00 news some night as the latest ham op who went apeshit someplace......(you know hams...their usually crazy SOB's to begin with !!)

This is SCARY SHIT folks !!

Quoting from the above link:

"Among a fringe community of paranoids, aluminum helmets (tinfoil hats) serve as the protective measure of choice against invasive radio signals. We investigate
the efficacy of three aluminum helmet designs on a sample group of four individuals. Using a $250,000 network analyser, we find that although on average all helmets attenuate invasive radio frequencies in either directions (either emanating from an outside source, or emanating from the cranium of the subject), certain frequencies are in fact greatly amplified.
These amplified frequencies coincide with radio bands reserved for government use according to the Federal Communication Commission (FCC).
Statistical evidence suggests the use of helmets may in fact enhance the government's invasive abilities. We theorize that the government may in fact have started the helmet craze for this reason..."

The USA signed the ITU treaty thus we have internationally agreed to it's requirements, one of which is to prove that anybody operating an Amateur Radio Station meets the minimum proficiency requirements as outlined in that treaty. The US congress ratified the the agreement, making it official and legally binding, and they have delegated the authority to enforce the treaty requirements to a federal agency, a.k.a FCC, by an act of congress.

By requiring the operator to have a license shows they meet the treaty minimum requirements by passing tests before they are issued the license. The FCC can impose higher standards but the minimum is set by the ITU treaty agreement. As any body who should have taken government class in grade school the first thing you learn is the rights granted in the Constitution are not absolute, i.e. they have bounds.

It is common knowledge that governments have burried underground transmission stations.
These beam up in the microwave range, and the hats focus (like a dish)
the radiation in the brain.

The recommended solution is to glue the hat on, and walk on your hands, upside down.

I posed this question to U.S. Senator Hillary Clinton's office and was told that a "blanket license" covered channels 1-40.
All channels above 40 are unassigned and no license is required to operate there. The same thing applies to all channels below channel one. However, hams operating below channel one are limited to 500 watts, while hams operating above channel 40 can run unlimited power.

If Lelnad is spamming you, document it all. Contact the ISP from which it originated and tell them you are not interested in having them provide you any information concerning their spammer, but that you are requesting they forward the information to the Redford Township (MI) prosecutor for investigation of harassment via electronic means by one of their criminals currently on probation for similar charges regarding harassment of others. Fraudulently submitting your email is a violation of the US Spam Act, a TOS violation of the ISP, and most importantly, a federal charge in regards to interstate harassment via electronic means. Websites of which he fraudulently submitted your email address to are usually more than happy to accommodate. Tell them their user has just plead guilty to similar charges regarding harassment of others and THEN give them his name and address. Tell them you are keeping records of all of your exchanges and complaints should you need to retain legal counsel.
Be certain to CC your email to uce@ftc.gov, Judge Wirth, and the Redford Township prosecutor. Judge Wirth is very receptive and interested in any news regarding lawbreaking by those she places on probation.

Messed about with?? normally they come in chunks of pure cut steak but the kidney... uuurgh.. hate it in any shape or form. If your speaking from experience you must have visited some really dodgy restaurants while you were over here. As far as salads go.. they arent cooked they are simply washed and put on the plate. Fancy boiling a salad.. lol...

well, you could always wear the hat on your ass, and it would block out the radiation from these "underground" sources.... but of course, this would open you to other radiation from other directions, unless you also wear one on your head. the best solution to looking "normal" here would be to line your grundies with tinfoil....

her FCC specialist staff member did and does know about FCC rules, especially since she is in contact with one of the commissioners. You

So, what are you saying? Are you implying you have access to

Ii like the looks of the Deluxe Shielding Dress Shirt. I wonder how that would go at airport security? Then there's a shorts. You'd be stripped to nothing but socks and still setting off alarms!

And the hat, wow. "Many people can actually sense the differences in the levels of "mind noise" from RF radiation. Provide your brain a quiet place without interference to your mental processes from RF radiation." I'd love to do a double blind test with placebo hats and see the results!

Her staff member obviously doesn't know squat either. The frequencies below and above cb channels 1-40 are allocated to other services and to operate on those frequencies without the proper permit or license is illegal. Hams can only operate on frequencies allocated to the amateur radio service and are not limited to 500 watts. Sounds like her staff member is as stupid as you are.

Guiness is NOT a UK drink... those Irish folk invented that, begorrah!

The UK national drink is tea , made with milk, hot water (and tea of course)... none of the iced tea you Texans seem to like. :-)

Steak and kidney pie is actually better washed down with one of the Aussie lagers!

OTOH prior to signing the treaty his analys would have merit he is just 50-75 years out of date must on a realy long propagation path is all

BTW the FCC can impose hgher standard than the treaty requires but the treaty does not empoer the FCC to violate other tenensts of the law or Two things come to mind. One, you have resorted to name calling, which means you have lost the argument. Two, Democrats always resort to name calling when they are losing an argument, so it would appear you are a Democrat. Lastly, your whole premise is moot, since the Tenth Ammendment trumps all regulation of radio frequencies, thereby making the FCC an outlaw agency, with no basis in our Constitution.

BTW, Roger is a Democrat, and a very liberal one too. He's on SSI, so that is not surprising.

I don't care anything about his personal affiars, no interest at all.
My interest in K1MAN is limited to the interest I think we all should have in the FCC trying to use and exploit someone less able to mount an effective defense of himself to establish precedent that might be used against the rest of us as to his pesonal affiars, I don't care he ma be bipolar (except as

This reminds me of a funny story:

Once upon a time there was a retired amateur going on a DX-pedition to the South Seas in the spring of '78 who set up his equipment and started operating... unfortunately a terrorist group decided he was an worthwhile target and overran his station. Last thing we heard on SSB was W4<garble> calling Mayday, Mayday, Mayday! <hiss> <static>. A few weeks later a forensics team found nothing but charred wood and bones. The leader of the team reported back to the coroner: "Looks like an old southern ham got roasted at Easter".

And that's why we have a Supreme Court to decide such issues. Making sure that we have competent judges to make the interpretations of the Constitution is a real concern and one reason why the current nominee is being looked at so closely.

I don't hate K1MAN. I don't know him personaly

Indeed I support his principled stand against the FCC. I do wish the fight was between a man less limited in his abilty to defend himself/make his case. I hope he prevails in this matter

You sir appear to one of those Fellows we see so often in here. If you are 178 percent something then you Hate it. I am more 74 percent supportor of K1MAN but I also yes the man has his faults. Who doesn't? I am concerned his faults may affect the outcome in ways that the FCC should be allowing wether the Nurse that first comented on his Bipolar was attacking him or not we;; the nurse will have to answer

I am disgusted with the FCC targeting him for this sort of attack, and not moderating ait actions to accomodate his condiction

Seems like you need to learn a few thing about how to fake documents. After all of the doctored up pics posted to this news group, yawn, nobody cares about another one.

I remember back in high school how somebody took a real death certificate and doctored it up using the assistant principal's name and address. By the end of the day fully half the students and a lot of the teaching staff thought the guy was dead from multiple gunshot wounds to the chest. Some students even went to the office asking were to send flowers too! The document even had the real city of Detroit's Coroners signature, the presiding doctor at the time of death etc. along with the raised seal. And that was before computers were used. Now people print duplicates of dollar bills on their inkjet photo printers from high quality scans. I've even heard of a few that even fooled some bill changing machines, which by the way is a crime called counterfeiting for those dumb enough to try it.

2 main possibilities...

1. Antenna fault.
Check all your connections for open or short circuits.

2. Knackered CB.
The RF output would be the most likely culprit, although the drive transistor could also do the same thing.

If unsure of which is to blame, you could try a different CB on the antenna or a different antenna on the same CB to see what happens. If you have 2 radios, swap them around.
If certain it is the CB, but unsure of how to repair it, take it to someone who knows what they are doing.

Peter.

I live a few miles from exit 4 from I 465 in Indy and moniter channel 19 frequently. Besides the cb shops, shop towel seller, music man, XXX dvd and vhs seller, hub cap cleaner, detailer, clean your cab and shampoo your carpet lady, and the hookers, you have the idiots that like to sing and use their cb noise toys to totally destroy the use of channel 19.

That to me is the same as calling someone a nigger. There is nothing wrong with using a CB. I would surmise a great many ham ops started with CB. Did getting that ham ticket increase his IQ? I think not. I have been a CBer since 1971 and still enjoy the hobby. I am not a ham by choice, not because That's one reason I got my ticket, it allows me more places to Actually many states are putting up web sites where you can get this info.

Should anyone be interested, the URL for the state of Missouri is http://www.courts.mo.gov/casenet/base/welcome.do
We also have a web site to check on sex offenders which lists there address.
I don't have that saved as I only have 1 neighbor within walking distance of my house.

Yup! It's not a matter of hating or liking something.
It's a matter of being able to use a radio, any radio!

Ah yes, the being a CBer defense. That'a as old as the crust in your

I have friends in law enforcement and I also at one time in my life worked security in a maximum security unit.
But you are correct about my feelings about the FCC, as they are a worthless

I found the closer you get to a metropolitan area, the more b.s. you encounter. It would be nice to have another channel devoted to traffic conditions and decent conversation among drivers without the b.s. from solicitations, stupid noise toys,etc. But this won't happen because the jokers will follow us to that channel and we're back where we started. There are many of us who are decent, but who hears us, except here. Any ideas?

I don't know what a "real amateur" is and I, for one, have never claimed to be such.

However, after a number of years of contributing to Usenet under my own name and callsign, my family was subjected to malicious and threatening letters sent by Stephen G Bryan G0SGB in 1998,
a matter for which the plods were involved.

His criminal activities followed on from an abusive, insulting, infantile and obsessive tirade by him in this NG, seemingly because he was intolerant of those who disagreed with his CBers' activity of WABbing.

Such threatening behaviour drives one underground, and also serves to illustrate, perhaps, the difference between a _REAL_ Radio Ham and a CBer-Masquerading-As-A-Radio-Ham?

some thing wrong with PBS they are too leftist but some of their stuff is pretty good

but anyway "corruption junction, what's your function" is play something from school house rock which I think was ABC way back when I

Polymath, you have my profound apologies on behalf of the entire worldwide ham community for the harm you have suffered. And as I just said in a seperate thread, it is things like this that make me think that while governments have a right to demand the addresses of licensed hams, it no longer has the right to publish them. That goes double for hams who happen to be minors... Sadly, depravity no longer limited to any single walk of life, and anonymity on the net is an importand safety measure that should now go hand in hand with exercising the right to free speech.

No. But that is a good idea for those starting out or really intense about avoiding all the crap out there. I am retired on a limited income and am perfectly happy with my rig. If I were younger, perhaps that would be an option. What I was getting at is why should a 70 year old man who has been thru the good times, when cb was young, then the bad times, when 23 channels weren't sufficient, then the good times, when cb expanded to 40 cannels, then these times. This is nothing like it used to be. I know times change. I guess I'm just venting and should accept it, but if the FCC should ever go to the southside of Indy for a week, they could issue fines to subsidize the FCC for a lengthy period of time. 10-10

Ahh, Joseph Lucas...the prince of darkness. The warm beer bit comes from having Lucas also build refrigerators. I too have been the victim of a string of British motorcars. Triumphs and Austins and the odd Lotus. I even race-prepped them. I also get around to flying aboard BAE-146s every once in a while. Just like British sports cars they are. Fast enough, handles like a housefly, not all that comfortable and as noisy as hell with the gates open.

Good point, he really is sick. I don't have to do much of anything to prove it, he provides the proof every post he makes. Anybody who drags a person's family members, who he has had no contact with or even knows directly or indirectly, into a dispute on a news group, where they have never made a post, with the clear intend to do them some harm or harassment is mentally ill beyond a doubt. You have somebody who wants to harass or harm people who are totally uninvolved in his personal vendetta and apparently considers such people as disposable, or just another convenient tool without any consideration for the harm he's doing, to further his perverted agenda of hate mongering. He has no more consideration for the innocent than the suicide bombers did, that just recently killed all those people in that wedding, we've been hearing about on the news the past few days. His mind set is exactly the same.

News group disputes between active posters is one thing, dragging innocent people into things is another and frankly I find it amazing that people on this group find it so acceptable. Otherwise people have an opportunity to put and end to his activities in this area. All it takes is one person to rat him out and end his behavior. Who knows whom his "next target" will be, maybe even you if he dislikes something you've said.

Can someone send me a link to listen to a scanner over the internet? I am looking for a stream that will work with winamp or windows media player. They work best with a screen reader, thanks.

Actually, had Frankie actually spent more than one HITCH in the Marine Corps, or had NOT spent the one and ONLY hitch he did serve tied up in the legal system, he'd know that yes, Marines actaully refer to enlistments as "hitches". They also call then "tours" and several other colorful euphemisms that don't need repeating here.

A "cruise", in general Marine Corps useage, refers to a deployment away from one's usual base, camp or air station on board a naval warship.

And obviously YOU didn't see where I DIDN'T make any inference group that I refer to as the Feeble Five.

You are a twice court-martialed disgrace to the Marine Corps.
There's nothing you could say one way or the other on ANY radio issue that would even remotely interest or encourage me.

There's nothing paranoid about it.

Frankie came in ranting and raving at LENNIE, calling him a fraud, etc etc, due to "MOS'es" that didn't jive with USMC numbers. He was right about the MOSes, but attacking the wrong person.

Sorry, Markie...There's a REAL Gunny right here. I have publically posted the dates of the Promotion Board that I was selected on.

I even posted the Selection Board for my promotion to Staff Sergeant before it.

Again...You and Frankie of Scummiland chose to ignore them since they render your rants baseless.

BTW...Both boards were for the ACTIVE DUTY USMC, not the USMCR...So yet another FrankieRant shot in the foot....

Sorry, Frankie...Just like your mindless attack about MOS'es when you came in here, you've gotten THIS one wrong too....

I NEVER stated that I had "...10+ years experience as an LPN/EMT while on active duty."

I CLEARLY stated that I got my EMT card in 86. I left the Corps in 92.

Then kindly explain why so many Amateurs hold so much interest in rec.radio.cb ? Theres plenty in there..some are even nice people... I personally have no interest in K1MAN in one way or another. I also have no real interest in the backstabbing and bitching that goes on amongst your fellow Hams and Hams/CB'ers, I just read some of the threads and unless I see something that aggrieves me i simply let it go... im not aggrieved now
btw. im simply trying to say you are wrong and a few Hams are interested in things 11 meters.

What is this absurd fascination with Morse Code? Wouldnt you rather just talk to people? I know all about the arguements about it getting through when all else fails but is it really life and death?? If i cant get through on the radio I use a Phone or the Internet. After all its just a hobby.
Besides, doesnt all that dot dot dot.. dash dash dash give you a headache

Dont get me wrong, im not having a go at Amateurs im just asking the question.. why is it so important?

It's not exactly the same no but it is along the same lines. Because he is a radio Amateur he believes he is superior to lowly CB users. Just like Rascist white people feel they are far superior than a black man. Bigotry comes in many forms, it isn't just black and white.

I think my use of the phrase, "Stolen Valor" is a frequent search term for those that seek out military fakes. Once it is used, those that defend the real vets get on it real quick.

One thing you must take on board Poly is that these threats that anyone receives arent from just Amateurs/CB'ers. They are from people who use a radio just like they use forums.. to upset and bully people and to force their sometimes vile views upon people. These people are in both Amateur and CB circles. Its not a CB fault, its down pure and simply to "nut jobs" which the majority of CB'ers and Amateurs arent. Unfortunately if you take a stand against these people and your personal info is easily available for these nut jobs then im afraid sometimes you will get threats upon yourself. Just because you post your replys with merely a "Handle" or first name doesnt mean your a cowering hiding lowlife, quite often its because people dont wish to have this s_it from nut jobs thrust upon them. You can still make a valid point without using your traceable details. I know you shouldnt have to worry about such things but we live in the real world. As for the nut jobs... sometimes simply ignoring them is the best thing to do. They crave the attention. If you dont give them the attention they move on. Whatever you say to them they will never change.....
